I'd prefer to do this after I have your notes on what was said.

As I've been following SARS pretty closely, there were no surprises. I was impressed by the level of thought and attention being given to the political, social, economic ramifications, as is well deserved.

Perhaps there was not enough time to go into these in the detail that might be called for.

Some of the wisest remarks were Bob Ursano's cautions about the need to motivate nurses and lab people and other first responders to expose themselves and families to hazard.
