Dec. 3, 1934 –

Dear Dr. Busch –

I find myself perplexed at the moment about the internship problem. I have felt for some time that, in view of my plans I need to start practising after two years of internship in surgery, an internship at Hopkins would be pretty fitted to my purposes. Here, if one is extremely lucky and can be the one in 8 interns starting, who reaches the residency, the process takes 9 years. This seems hardly practicable for me. –

I talked to Dr Andrus (assistant dean) some time ago; he felt much as I did about my interning here, & after looking over my record, suggested Massachusetts General Hospital, Presbyterian in New York, & the Cornell Hospital in New York. He agreed with my suggestion that it would be well to work in the hospital I chose, either as substitute during the summer or as a student in surgery in October & November in either Harvard or P & S medical school. I am inclined to favor transferring to one of these schools for the first quarter next fall in surgery, in as much as I should break about even financially.

I would much appreciate an opinion from you regarding what you consider the best hospital for me to concentrate my effort upon. Do you think I should apply here at Hopkins? -

The reason for the rush now is that if I transfer to Harvard or P&S for the first quarter next year, I shall want to rearrange my schedule here this spring so as to include fourth-year surgery in the last quarter of my third year. The medical school office wants to know.

I see Edward only occasionally, but he seems to be getting along very well. I have already asked him about the matter in hand. Regards to Mrs Burch & Katherine when you write —

Sincerely

Charles
