

16 April 1969

Dr. H. Gobind Khorana
University of Wisconsin
Institute for Enzyme Research
1710 University Avenue
Madison, Wisconsin 53706
U.S.A.

Dear Gobind

I was sorry to hear that you had not been feeling quite your usual self. If you want to come to Cambridge, either on your way to Switzerland or on the way back, you are always welcome. There is no need to feel that you have to do any work while you are here. We can just relax by the Cam.

I quite agree, it is sensible not to worry too much at this stage about the sequence of the alanine tRNA. However, I feel somebody ought to check it. I am not sure whether the people here on the top floor would be interested in doing this.

If you could send us informational amounts of the TAG polymer, we would really be extremely grateful. Malcolm Gelfand tells me that he can easily tool up to multiply and transcribe it.

I am not coming to the Gordon Conference this year, but Brian Clark and John Finch hope to be there. Just another reason for you to drop in to see us here.

F.H.C. Crick