DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

SECTION 1. President. — The President shall preside at all meetings of the Academy and Council. He shall give a deciding vote in all cases of a tie, except in election of officers; call special meetings at his discretion, or upon the written request of three Active members; sign all certificates and diplomas issued; and perform such other duties as shall from time to time be assigned him.

SECT. 2. Vice-President. — The Vice-President shall sign all certificates and diplomas issued by the Academy. In the absence of the President he shall preside at the meetings of the Academy, and in the absence of both these officers a President pro tem. shall be appointed.

He shall notify all members and officers of their election, committees of their appointment, and the subjects referred to them; keep the manuscript Constitution, By-Laws, and Code of Ethics of the Academy; keep a record of the membership, including resignations and other changes; superintend the printing for the Academy, and report in reference to the same at the annual meeting; and perform such other duties as shall from time to time be assigned him.

SECT. 5. Treasurer. — The Treasurer shall collect all dues, keep an exact account of all receipts and expenditures, and the vouchers therefor; notify all members of arrearages, and report to the Executive Committee at the annual meeting the names of all members in arrears for two years, and read a written report of the condition of his official affairs, at the annual meeting or upon order of the Academy; and shall pay out money only on order of the President, countersigned by the Recording Secretary.

SECT. 6. Librarian. — The Librarian shall have charge of all books and specimens, instruments, and appliances belonging to the Academy, keep a correct register of the same, and report in reference to the same at the annual meeting.

be deemed proper by the Executive Committee.

SECT. 8. Executive Committee. — The Executive Committee shall provide proper places for all meetings of the Academy, and arrange for papers and other scientific and professional matter for annual and all regular meetings; examine into the moral and professional standing of candidates for membership, and, if no objection to the candidate is found, report the same at the next regular meeting to that at which the candidate was proposed. They shall audit the accounts of the Treasurer, and have full power to remit the whole or any part of the dues of delinquents reported to them by the Treasurer at the annual meeting, or to make a statement of any special case or cases to the Academy at any regular meeting.

If a majority of the Council, after such investigation, shall be of the opinion that the charges are prima facie well founded, they shall serve a copy of them on the accused, and appoint a day for hearing his defence, of which day he and the party making the charges shall have at least ten days' notice; and if the accused, in person or by counsel, who shall be a Fellow of the Academy, having had a fair opportunity to hear the evidence against him, and to make his defence, shall be found guilty by a two-thirds vote of the Council, they shall so report to the Academy at its next regular meeting, when the Academy shall determine the penalty, be it reprimand, suspension, or expulsion, which shall be decided by a two-thirds vote of the members present. If, after due notification, the accused party or counsel shall fail to appear at the time and place of trial, without satisfactory excuse rendered at the time, he shall be considered as admitting the truth of the charges against him, and shall be liable to sentence accordingly.

CODE OF ETHICS.

ARTICLE I.

THE DUTIES OF THE PROFESSION TO THEIR PATIENTS.

SECTION 1. The dentist should fully recognize the obligations involved in the discharge of his duties towards his patients. As they are, in most cases, unable to correctly estimate the character of his operations, his own sense of right must guarantee faithfulness in their performance.

SECT. 2. The dentist should lend his influence to encourage a sound dental and medical education, and to uphold in the community correct views of the powers and the limitations of dental science and art. It is not to be expected that the patient will possess a very extended or accurate knowledge of professional matters. The dentist should make due allowance for this, patiently explaining many things which may seem quite clear to himself. He should encourage no false hopes by promising success, when, in the nature of the case, there is uncertainty.

ARTICLE II.

MAINTAINING PROFESSIONAL CHARACTER.

SECTION I. In his relation with another dental practitioner and his patients, the dentist should be governed by strict rules of honor and courtesy. His conduct should be such as, if universally imitated, would insure the mutual confidence of all dental practitioners.

SECT. 2. The professional success of a practitioner depends upon qualities connected with his moral character, his scientific attainments, and also his industry and business talents. But the relation of practitioners of dentistry to patients is not like that of tradesmen to their customers. The kind of competition which might be considered honorable in business cannot exist between dentists without diminishing their usefulness, and lowering the standing of the dental profession.

SECT. 3. If a dentist treats a patient during the temporary absence or illness of the usual dentist, or in case of accident or other emergency, he should direct that the patient go to the former as soon as he is able to take charge of the case, and should then relinquish it to him.

SECT. 4. It is unprofessional to resort to public advertisements, cards, hand-bills, posters, or signs, calling attention to peculiar styles of work, lowness of prices, or special modes of operating, or to claim superiority over neighboring practitioners, to publish reports of cases or certificates in public prints, to go from house to house to solicit or perform operations, to circulate or recommend nostrums, or to perform any similar acts.

SECT. 5. Consultation should be encouraged in cases of unusual responsibility or doubt.

A consultation is called for the benefit of the patient, and to give him the advantage of collective skill. Should there be a difference of opinion, discussion should be temperate, and always confidential.

A consulting dentist should be careful to say or do nothing to impair the confidence of the patient or his family in the attending dentist.
