

SOME FOLKS Can't Sleep Nights!

And certainly they are to be pitied—for of all causes that ruin health and happiness, and rapidly wear out the life, LOSS OF SLEEP is the greatest!—When the usual hours of labor are over, and the soft wing of night settles gently down upon the earth, lulling the weary to sweet repose—they are unable to become calm—excitement continues, the brain is hot, the mind is filled with all the cares, and again goes through with all the wearisome scenes of the day. The wife and mother worries on through the night, starting out of troubled and broken dreams of sick children, unexpected visitors, or poor help—the husband rolls and tumbles in bed, as notes, stocks, bonds, trades, and all his perplexing business affairs tumble and roll about in his brain—the poor girl, overworked in factory, or by constant plying of the everlasting needle, too tired to sleep soundly, gets but slight relief as the night hours hurry by.

They are irritable and peevish day and night—even persons with first-rate natural dispositions, who, if they were well, and not “nervous,” would be “as mild as a May morning.” These poor victims of “blue devils,” irritability, low spirits, sleeplessness, and the whole catalogue of similar affections, certainly feel as bad themselves as they can make anybody else feel around them, and look for relief most carefully. Physicians have hitherto been unable to prescribe with certainty for the relief of these affections, coming under the general name of NERVOUSNESS!

Nervous Diseases have been considered almost hopeless! Preparations of OPIUM, VALERIAN, and a few other products of the vegetable kingdom, together with poisonous mineral solutions, have alone been relied on, Costiveness, Piles, and other injuries often following their use. But the valuable discovery of Dr. Dodd not only commends itself to the Medical Profession, by whom it is extensively used, but being put up with special reference to the popular demand for a RELIABLE NERVOUS REMEDY, is sold by respectable Druggists generally, within the reach of all.
