

(2)—the article purported to be an enriched noodle product, a food for which a definition and standard of identity had been prescribed by regulations, and its label failed to bear the name of the food specified in such definition and standard, namely, "enriched noodle products"; and 403(j)—the article purported to be and was represented as a food for special dietary uses by reason of its vitamin and mineral content and its label failed to bear a statement, as required by regulations, of the proportion of the minimum daily requirement for infants for vitamin B<sub>1</sub>, vitamin B<sub>2</sub>, niacin or niacinamide, and iron supplied by such food when consumed in a specified quantity during a period of 1 day; and the specific plant name which was the source of the "special enriched flour" in the article.

Egg spaghetti, 403(a)—when shipped, the label statements "Prince Egg Spaghetti * * * Contains 20% Whole Eggs," and "The pure golden color of Prince Egg Spaghetti comes from the extra eggs (20% Whole Eggs), were false and misleading, since the article was not significantly different from egg spaghetti generally, that is, standardized food.

Egg noodles, 403(g) (2)—when shipped, the article purported to be enriched egg noodles, a food for which a definition and standard of identity had been prescribed by regulations and its label failed to bear the name of the food specified in such definition and standard, namely, "enriched egg noodles."

DISPOSITION: Subsequent to 1-17-62, Prince Macaroni Co., Inc., Brooklyn, N.Y., claimed the articles. Thereafter, approximately 2,500 pounds of the articles were inadvertently denatured. On 4-18-63, a consent decree of condemnation was filed and the remaining quantities of the articles were destroyed since the articles had deteriorated after seizure.
