TO THE AFFLICTED.

In presenting this new edition of the “Indian Hygieina,” would respectfully say, that since my old work was published, very many new ideas have presented themselves, rendering it necessary, in order to give a satisfactory and complete guide to the various compounds which I am preparing from the great variety of medicinal plants that a beneficent Creator has provided, adapted to the almost unnumbered ills human flesh, through the use of mineral poison, or intemperate habits, is constantly subject to, and to prove by the many witnesses who have, in the most cheerful and thankful manner, allowed their names to be published for the good of those who may need the help I am sure to give by my original and exclusive method of treatment, unlike, in every respect, all other practitioners.

“A REMEDY FOR EVERY ILL.”

I do not claim to cure all diseases with one medicine. Experience teaches me that the great variety of complicated diseases requires compounds adapted to each separate disease, all harmonizing with each other, thus producing more effect with a small dose than others can by giving large quantities of any single ingredient; and to the Indian, and no other, is due the first recognition and acceptance of those infallible antidotes and remedies in the Indian system of cure.

Whether a traveler, in gratitude to his red nurse for speedy restoration from some sudden illness, purchased at liberal prices receipts for her specifics of herbs is not recorded. The Indian, separated from the rest of the human family—a child of the forest—added to the cyclopedia of human acquirements his share of truth in the department of religion, the glorious idea of one great and all-pervasive spirit—in medicine the UNIVERSAL MEDICINE OF PLANTS.

“E’en the poor Indian, whose untutored mind,
Sees God in clouds, or hears him in the wind;
Whose soul proud science never taught to stray
Far as the solar walk or milky way;—
Yet simple nature to his hope is given,
Behind the cloud-topt hill or humble heaven;
Some safer world in depth of woods embraced—
Some happier island in the watery waste,
Where slaves once more their native land behold,
No fiends torment nor christians thirst for gold,—
And thinks, admitted by yon equal sky,
His faithful dog shall bear him company.”

“ You purchase pain with all that joy can give,
And die of nothing but a rage to live.”

HUMAN ANATOMY.

I have introduced in this work the anatomy of man, that all may know themselves, for to know ourself is to live. The human structure contains more science and mechanical ingenuity than all else on earth. Simple, but how complete. Learn to keep, this our human structure in order, to do all that nature requires us to do to preserve our health, and not do that which will in any way impair it. Be true to thyself and thy nature's God. Count the strings upon the human heart, where one looks upon the human form and sees its complicated mechanism, will they not wonder that from all its combination that there should not be disorder and inharmony, when they reflect upon the abuses our poor natures are subject to during a lifetime. We are fearfully and wonderfully made. Each child, from early youth should be taught the anatomy and physiology of himself; his life should be directed from a human chart, and then when he ripens into manhood he will see that, having been temperate and true to himself in all things, that the human structure thus formed will be a true manikin of health and manly beauty, then often would he think:

“ How sweet to muse upon his skill displayed,—
Infinite skill, in all that he has made;
To trace in nature's most minute design
The signature and stamp of power divine;
Contrivance exquisite, expressed with ease,
Where unassisted light nor beauty sees;
The shapely limbs and lubricated joint,
Within the small dimensions of a point;—
Muscle and nerve miraculously spun,
His mighty work—who speaks and it is done.
Oh! indivisible things scarce seen revealed,
Or whom one atom is our ample field!”

THE DELINEATION OF DISEASES.

“ Himself took our infirmities and bore our sicknesses ”— Matt. VIII.

The delineation of diseases I consider one of the most particular points in the practice of medicine, and in this one thing, more than any other, should there be a change with practitioners.

I claim that man to man is so constructed that each is, in one sense, a galvanic battery. Electricity may pass from one to the other that will be so tangible that a fine, sympathetic organized person can feel the current passing; when the telegraphic line is on the ground the current is broken. When the conditions and surroundings are not right and harmonious, the physician or sympathetic one can detect it, as well as an operator in a telegraph office, man being the finer machine for magnetism and the telegraphic machine the coarser instrument, through which magnetism in a crude state passes. I am one of those sympathetic persons that can exchange electricity or magnetism with a subject at any distance. The first symptoms I experience are that the pulsations of the heart commences to beat in unison with the person I am examining; and I feel immediately the deranged organs of the person, as I feel the same derangement on myself. Thus I detect symptoms of disease on any one, and at any distance. This I believe fully upon scientific principles. Some call this Spiritualism, some the Devil; but I have yet to see the connection with either, as part of my ability in delineation. In the first place, I do not go into magnetic sleep, or condition, but remain the same as at any other time, conversing with any one in the room upon any subject—it has no effect upon any examination I may be engaged with. This, as I understand it, is different from Spiritual mediums, for they, I believe, go into a condition of mesmerism or magnetic sleep. As for the Devil, I can't think it is from him, especially our orthodox Devil, unless he has changed his business for good instead of evil. I have found this mode of delineation to be perfect in almost every case. If I have failed it is but about once in fifty cases; this can be accounted for by the conditions not being right. To do all this, I must admit, requires a peculiar organism. That this is injurious to one's health, I have no doubt. When I first began this method of practice, I could examine eighty cases in a day, now I find ten to fifteen cases exhausts my vitality as much as the eighty. I would here say, that those sending for a delineation should be particular, and not have the case one from any class of acute diseases, such as fever, &c;—this kind of disease I do not treat, and do not wish to have anything to do with, for I retain the symptoms and suffer to a great extent, such as nose bleed, hemorrhage, &c.; this has frequently happened. It would not be so in all cases; I find that the organism of the person is also impressed upon my mind so that when I have time I often describe the different points of character of the one that is being examined, and that very accurately. This, also, I object to, unless the person should be present, so that a conversational interview could be had, as it requires more time than I can spare. The price for every examination is one dollar, whether the patient takes medicine or not. I want but the name and age of the person, and place of residence, Town, County and State, (no lock of hair as erroneously stated).

I have already made examinations of over 30,000 cases.  See letters confirming examinations, on pages 7, 9 and 11.

WHITE SWELLING—HIP DISEASE.

SYMPTOMS.—In the commencement there is a very severe pain felt deep in the joint, and, when the child or person moves, the pain becomes intolerable. As it progresses there is swelling, but no redness—a shining whiteness, with hardness or callus. It slowly increases till the swelling is very considerable and the distress great, and suppuration ensues. There is a discharge of matter from a number of openings. The limb wastes, become bent, and, when in the hip, osseous matter fills up the joint and slowly discloses the head of the bone, either causing permanent dislocation or sickness; fleshy excrescences shoot out from the ulcers, showing that the bone is affected, and in process of time there is generally small pieces of bone detached. The patient is very thin and pale, with much constitutional disturbance, hectic fever, &c.

CAUSES.—A taint of the blood, cold, injuries, malpractice. &c.

PILES.

SYMPTOMS.—A patient afflicted with the bleeding piles is subject to greater or less discharges of blood, from a rupture or distension of the veins while evacuating his bowels, and sometimes a fatal haemorrhage succeeds.

CAUSES.—The piles are often occasioned by aloetic purgatives. Sedentary habits, corpulence or a phletoric habit, a morbid condition of the liver, pregnancy, costiveness and drastic purgatives of any kind will occasion them.

The blood passes through the heart at the rate of five hundred pounds an hour.

FISTULA.

SYMPTOMS.—The fistula in ano usually commences with swelling near the rectum, attended with great pain, hardness and accute inflammation; the tumor advances slowly to suppuration, and matter is formed. It often terminates in consumption.

CAUSES.—The causes of fistula are numerous, such as costiveness and relaxation of the bowels, derangement of the liver and alimentary canal, sedentary habits, high living, phletora, bruises, piles, &c.

The air cell surface of the lungs is estimated at one thousand five hundred feet.

WORMS.

SYMPTOMS.—The common symptoms of worms are, paleness of the countenance, and at other times a universal flushing of the face; itching of the nose, (this, however, is doubtful, as children pick their noses in all diseases); starting, and grinding of the teeth in sleep; swelling of the upper lip; the appetite sometimes bad—at other times quite voracious; looseness; a sour breath; hard swelled bowels; great thirst; the urine frothy, and sometimes of a whitish color; griping, or colic pains; an involuntary discharge of saliva, especially when asleep; frequent pains of the side, with a dry cough, and unequal pulse, palpitations of the heart, swoonings, drowsiness, cold sweats, palsy, epileptic fits, with many other unaccountable nervous symptoms. Small bodies in the excrements, resembling melon or cucumber seeds, are symptoms of the tape-worm.

CAUSES.—Worms may proceed from various causes, but they are seldom found except in weak and relaxed stomachs, where the digestion is bad. Sedentary persons are more liable to them than the active and laborious. Those who eat great quantities of unripe fruit, or live much on raw herbs and roots, are generally subject to worms. There seems to be an hereditary disposition in some persons to this disease.

Advice to right confirms us in the wrong."

INFLAMMATION OF THE BLADDER.

SYMPTOMS.—Where this disease exists, an acute, burning pain, and some degree of tension at the bottom of the abdomen, with a constant desire to urinate, a difficulty in voiding it, or total stoppage, a frequent inclination to go to stool, much uneasiness and heat, a general febrile disposition, a frequent and hard pulse, sickness and vomiting not unfrequently attending. It sometimes becomes chronic and is very afflicting; there is a frequent desire to urinate, and a discharge of mucus and blood.

CAUSES.—It is caused by improper use of acid medicines, permanent or spasmodic stricture, local irritation from lodgment of stone, hardened fæces, or a diseased state of the prostate gland, and mechanical injury, as well as by all usual causes of inflammation.

There are one million, two hundred and ninety-six thousand follicle containing secretions of digestion in a person's stomach.

RHEUMATISM.

SYMPTOMS.—Chronic is often the consequence of acute rheumatism; but it occurs also, frequently, as a direct consequence of exposure to cold and damp air, more especially when the system is under the influence of mercury. The affected parts are commonly neither swollen nor red; nor is there often any manifest fever connected with the chronic variety of the disease, although quickness, tension and contraction of the pulse are in some instances present in the evening and during the night. The pain often wanders from one part to another, fixing itself by turns in the head, shoulders, knees, wrists, fingers, hips, lions, &c., more especially in those cases which approach the sub-acute character. Some individuals are hardly ever entirely free from pain; others are affected with it only occasionally, on the occurrence of damp and cold weather. In some instances the pain is seated in the joints; in others, in the muscles and parts situated between the joints. After remaining at rest for a while the patient feels stiffness and pain on attempting to move the affected limb; but, on using exercise until the body becomes warm, both the pain and stiffness usually disappear. Those who are subject to this form of the disease generally feel a dull, aching pain in one or more joints on the approach of stormy and rainy weather. Severe and inveterate cases of chronic rheumatism are apt to give rise to organic diseases of the tendons, wasting and hardening of the muscular structure about the affected parts. The joints stiff. A jelly-like effusion into the cavity of the affected joints occurs occasionally.

CAUSES.—The causes of rheumatism are frequently the same as those of an inflammatory fever, viz.: an obstructed perspiration, the immoderate use of strong liquors and sudden changes of the weather. All quick transitions from heat to cold are liable to occasion the rheumatism. Very obstinate rheumatisms have likewise been brought on by persons not accustomed to it, allowing their feet to continue long wet. The same effects are often produced by wet clothes, damp beds, sitting or lying on the damp ground, travelling in the night, &c.

The rheumatism may likewise be occasioned by excessive evacuations or the stoppage of customary discharges. It has often the effect of chronic diseases, which vitiate the humours.

The rheumatism prevails in cold, damp, marshy countries. It is the most common among those who are ill-clothed, live in low, damp houses, and eat coarse and unwholesome food, which contains but little nourishment and is not easily digested.

TO APPLICANTS FOR EXAMINATIONS.

All persons sending for a delineation of disease will abide by the following :

Those sending for an examination to satisfy their own curiosity without any good to themselves or others, must not expect it to be correct, but would apply to their nearest afflicted friend, especially where the one sent for has no particular ailment.

In cases where it is convenient, I would prefer to have the person wishing a delineation of their disease, send their name written by themselves.

I would have it distinctly understood that this mode is not to be trifled with, but it is for the best good to humanity, and all persons disposed to make light of it will please consider well before they make the attempt, for the time spent with such is lost.

When a patient finds a pain or bad feeling described on one side and they have it on the other, they can account for it in this wise : When a person is NEGATIVE to me, the symptoms will be taken on the same side ; when POSITIVE, on the opposite side.

When people call at the office for an EXAMINATION, and more than ONE is in the room when the examination is made, I should be just as apt to take symptoms from one as from another ; and when there are TWO names sent in ONE letter, both wishing an examination, I am apt to mix the symptoms, not having the power to distinguish one from the other, so that in both these cases a dissatisfaction will be likely to occur.

I have often taken symptoms of a person that some invalid has got to write for them. I have also taken symptoms of sick people that were in the room at the time that some other ones name was being sent ;—even the thought of the person that is writing sometimes may be on some one, and that one though not the person wishing the examination, I should take the symptoms of. This, of course, is not always the case. I suppose it has something to do with my receptability to the person. I cite their cases, so that those making application for an examination may know causes and reasons for any failure (should one occur,) that they could not account for.

I wish to examine no cases except of long standing and chronic. Should the patient be suffering with a recent cold or acute indisposition at the time of examination, it will tend to give less satisfaction where there are chronic symptoms. If all sending would abide by these remarks though there are many others that could be suggested, they would have no reason to be dissatisfied.

In no case will an examination be made unless the fee is inclosed in the letter, so that those that send and do so with the thought that it will not cost anything will surely be disappointed. The fee is one dollar.

DROPSY OF THE ABDOMEN.

SYMPTOMS.—This variety of dropsy is often preceded by loss of appetite, sluggishness, dryness of the skin, oppression at the chest, cough, diminution of the natural discharge of urine, and costiveness. Shortly after the appearance of these symptoms an enlargement in the abdomen is perceived, which extends gradually, and keeps on increasing until the whole belly becomes at length uniformly swelled and tense. The distension varies according to the posture of the body, the weight being felt most on that side on which the patient lies; while at the same time the distension becomes somewhat less on the opposite side.

CAUSES.—A preternatural collection of serous fluid, whether in the cellular membrane or in the cavities of the body, is caused by absorption falling short of exhalation in these cells and cavities; and this effect may be produced either by increased effusion from the exhalant arteries, or from diminished action of the absorbents. Absorption is increased, although not in proportion to the exhalation; and, therefore, the cause of dropsy is in the exhalant vessels, which pour out more serum or water than the absorbents take up, and thus collects and forms dropsy.

Increased effusion from the exhalants may arise,

1. From their relaxation, which may be occasioned by fevers, continued grief, excessive evacuations of any kind, the several species of intemperance, indolence and inactivity, or by drinking only stagnant or cold water when heated.

2. From superabundance of serum in the blood, which may be occasioned by the above-mentioned causes; by a penurious diet, profuse hæmorrhage and repeated bleeding, weakened powers of digestion, interruption of the watery excretions, jaundice, &c.

There are over one hundred thousand deaths alone, annually, of consumption in the United States.

CHRONIC INFLAMMATION OF THE LIVER.

SYMPTOMS.—A dull pain in the right side and top of the shoulder, the stomach sometimes disordered, yellow tinge of the skin, and often a swelling over the region of the liver.

There is usually in this complaint dyspepsia, cough with slight expectoration, headache, lowness of spirits or despondency, debility or weakness, flatulence, morbid sensibility, great irritability, jaundice, gall stones, emaciation, stools clay colored, tongue coated, costiveness and indigestion, urine pink colored, countenance sallow.

CAUSES.—Arising from long-continued intermittents and other causes.

The whole mass of blood in a person's system passes through the heart and lungs every four minutes.

INFLAMMATION OF THE HEART.

SYMPTOMS.—Pain in the region of the heart, suffocating weight, violent palpitation, motion of the heart, breathing by starts, dyspnea or difficulty of breathing, increased by motion or exercise. Pressure also aggravates the symptoms. Pulse frequent and bounding; the countenance has a peculiar pale and haggard appearance.

EFFECTS OF THE INDIAN REMEDIES.

All persons laboring under a combination of diseases that have assumed a local and CHRONIC form who take a full course of my remedies should bear in mind, before a reaction takes place in the system, they will not feel as well; the remedies sometimes produce a general relaxation of the whole system, loss of appetite, headache, tired feeling all over, and a complete riled state of the system. One will readily see such an effect is necessary; in most cases the chronic symptoms become acute. In from one week to twelve days the most of such troubles will be overcome, and then, as a healthy foundation has been laid, and the system free from the most aggravating causes, the patient will begin to gain in strength, and the complaints readily yield to the influence of the remedies.

I give this notice particularly for those that know but little in regard to the laws of health, or remedies for diseases, or their effect upon diseases.

There are plenty of friends standing ready to express their opinion either in favor of or against these and all remedies, as it may happen; and it is often the case, some Dr. drops a word or two of discouragement, knowing the remedies conflict with his mode of practice, and of course he will condemn them. I would further say, in cases of combined chronic disease where the patient gains from the first dose of these remedies or any other, that in nine cases out of ten, after a few weeks they fall back, the medicine loses its effect, and they will not recover; therefore, I deem it good to see a patient's system generally stirred up for the first two weeks; in such cases where they are not frightened off, their health will be restored. When there is but one organic disease, and that CHRONIC, these symptoms will not always follow; perhaps the trouble may be a little more acute for a few days, and still the patient gain from the first.

I want it distinctly understood, I use no mineral poisons whatever in my remedies, and know they will not injure the smallest infant. I prepare upwards of one hundred and twenty five natural Indian Remedies, for all chronic diseases men are heir to, not one of them injurious to the most delicate constitution; each one particularly adapted to change the predisposition to the disease for which it is recommended.

In all cases where the directions are not fully understood, it would be better to send immediately and have it made plain; if the symptoms should be so varied from this as to need an explanation, the patient will oblige me, as well as help themselves, by writing and have it all understood. When any one recovers from the use of my remedies, I would like for them to write me the full particulars for reference; by this they will be doing a deed of charity to suffering humanity. All such of my patients that wish to communicate their cures to me can do so, and I assure all that they shall be used to do good. I will give such a fitting place in this work, according to their merit. No humane person can refuse this, for there are many that seek relief and are convinced only by reference of cures like their own; lend then a helping hand to all.

DR. LIBBEY CURES CANCER.

It has long been, and still is the supposition that cancer, together with other forms of chronic disease are necessarily incurable, this I of the Vegetable Kingdom, unhesitatingly deny. So far from it, I affirm them to be as easily cured as most any other disease. To support my assertion I ask but the countenance, and fair and honest trial from the poor and afflicted people.

My object being chiefly the relief of this portion of God's suffering children, I expect by a candid exposition of facts to satisfy the public of the entire efficacy of my system of cure, by remedies which are natures own antidote for diseases, even the most skeptical must become convinced of the wonderful recent progress in the healing art, by the substitution of remedies so celebrated and infallible in the hands of the aboriginal children of the forest. Those wishing more personal proof of my affirmation will, upon application, be furnished with direct certificates of any number of responsible persons I have been fortunate in treating successfully.

When one sees the extent of this development of disease, and then reflects upon the result if not cured, he will soon come to dread the "Hydra monster."

Is the hydra monster creeping,
And feeling for thy heart-strings?
Have you in vain been seeking
For news of cure which no one brings?
Cheer up, good friend! say, do not fear,
If you just apply to Libbey, it will surely disappear!

☞ Two-thirds of the cases of incurable insanity are caused from SELF-POLLUTION.

INFLAMMATION OF THE EYE.

SYMPTOMS.—Sharp pain confined to a point, as if occasioned by the presence of extraneous matter; great heat and redness; the parts swell, and the vessels of the eye not only increase in size and become turgid, but appear more numerous than in the natural state: great pain upon the least motion of the eyeball; morbid sensibility to light; effusion of tears of an excoriating quality. If the inflammation run high, a febrile disposition attends.

After a longer or shorter continuance, these appearances gradually abate, or entirely cease; but in some cases, although the patient is left free from pain, tumour, and symptomatic fever, yet the suffused redness of the eye and the external marks of inflammation still remain, and long continue to exist after every other symptom has subsided.

During the continuance of the inflammation small ulcers are often formed upon the cornea, and little collections of matter are sometimes deposited, which frequently harden into white, opaque specks, and either partially or totally obstruct the entrance of light.

The ophthalmia tarsi consists in a chronic inflammation (frequently with ulceration) of the sebaceous glands, which are situated in the tarsus or edges of the eyelids. It is often productive of much irritation, and, when severe, occasions the destruction of the eyelashes. It is a scrofulous affection.

CAUSES.—External injuries; as blows, contusions, wounds of the eyes; extraneous bodies, of an irritating nature, introduced under the eyelids; exposure to bleak winds and cold, too free a use of vinous and spirituous liquors, suppression of accustomed discharges, long exposure to strong light, a fixed attention to some minute object, and inversion of the eyelids. It is symptomatic of certain other diseases, as measles, small-pox, scurvy, scrofula, and syphilis. Contagion.

☞ The circulation of the blood was discovered by Dr. Harvey, in the year 1692.

RICKETS.

THIS is a disease common to children, and caused by debility. It first shows itself in the glands; the bowels are enlarged; the face swells and becomes altered; the spine is bent in the form of the letter S; the flesh is flabby; the body wastes; the forehead is unusually prominent, and the neck small; the teeth are liable to drop out; the ribs become flattened; the breast-bone rises; joint-bones enlarged; and the bones so weak and soft that they are unable to support the body; stools unnatural. Sometimes deformity of the female pelvis, and other parts, follow. It needs simular treatment to Scrofula.

☞ Venereal diseases, caused from specific poison, may be inoculated, locally or constitutionally.

I would make a true statement of my case to the public, hoping that by so doing that those afflicted with cancers will read, and thereby obtain relief, knowing that this loathsome disease is one ever to be dreaded by the human family.

When I was seventeen years of age, I had what the physicians called a Rose Cancer make its appearance over the jugular vein, on the right side of my neck and face. It grew rapidly in size until it was as large as a quart bowl; my friends despairing of relief were about to withdraw all hope, but as the last resort, recommended me to go to Philadelphia and have it cut out. Thinking this the only alternative, I consented. The Professor told me that it was a Rose Cancer, and could be cut out, but would return again. This operation was performed, but in a few months after it began to grow again, as I was told it would do. Again I became alarmed, thinking I had done all I could do, for my family physician told me that cancers were incurable; but at this time I heard of Dr. Libbey being apt in removing this complaint and immediately called on him to prescribe for me. He first proceeded to cleanse the blood, after which he proceeded to apply his Indian Cancer plaster, which expelled the cancer and healed up the orifice from which it came. I am now well, with an assurance of a continued freedom from the disease. Those suffering from cancer, or any chronic disease, can do no better than to consult Dr. Libbey immediately.

ORINGE TUCKER.

To whom it may concern :

This is to certify that a cancer made its appearance on my tongue, causing severe pain and suffering, and at times rendering a mastication of food nearly impossible. I could get no physician to warrant a cure until I consulted Dr. Libbey, who immediately consented to undertake the case. The location of the cancer was considered the worst of any for the reason that the moisture of the mouth dissolved the plasters nearly as fast as they could be applied. Fortunately the doctor did not confine himself to plasters alone, but by using his Blood Purifier, and numerous Vegetable Washes, caused the same effect as the plasters; the result was a speedy and final cure of this fatal disease. My statement, though plain, is none the less true, and I wish that all who are troubled in this way may be induced by it to try nature's remedies, and be cured, before it is too late.

To the Public :

My boy, about twelve years old, had what the physicians called a Rose Cancer, make its appearance under his right eye. Having a dread of the final result of this disease unless cured, and having witnessed much suffering in others from this complaint, I resolved, if possible, to have it cured, knowing that the general belief was that cancers were incurable. In the height of my anxiety, I was assured by a friend that Dr. Libbey could cure cancers. I called on him, and am happy to say that his mode of treatment had the desired effect. I earnestly entreat those afflicted not to despair, for relief is at hand.

E. W. HITCHCOCK.

Kelly's Island, Erie Co., Ohio.

I have been cured by Dr. Libbey's new mode, of a cancer, (a severe case) It began to develop itself some twenty years ago. It grew gradually in size until it involved one eye, the nose, and cheek on right side of the face. The thought of being eaten up with a cancer was to me most dreadful; and for these years of anxiety I am more than blest by so perfect a cure, through the aid and skill of Dr. Libbey. I must confess that I had little faith in having it used, and was only persuaded by the strongest urging and talk from my friends to give the remedies a trial, the result being so perfect a cure that across the room one could not discern the scar. Now, poor, afflicted friends, you that have cancer, call on Dr. Libbey and give him a trial. I know by experience that he can cure very bad cases of cancers.

1st. The greatest preservatives of health, are exercise, cleanliness and temperance. These may be practiced by all ranks, at all seasons and places.

2d. A due regard to exercise clears the vessels and promotes the circulation of the blood, and is absolutely indispensable to the preservation of health. Of the varieties, walking is the best adapted to those who are able to endure it; riding to those who are not.

3d. In the same connection, (since it appertains directly to the exercise of that wonderful vesicular mechanism, “the lungs,”) we urge as strenuously as possible, the necessity for the constant breathing of pure air. As little refreshing, nay, as absolutely injurious, as would be a muscular exercise, with the limbs tightly bandaged or otherwise cramped and constrained, is the respiration of even slightly contaminated atmosphere; how fatal then the carelessness of the majority of persons to the insidious closeness and impurity of air at balls, theatres and social entertainments, where large gatherings are confined in illy ventilated halls, so common at our age.

The air upon the sea and immediately surrounding, is generally distinguished for its greater coldness, purity and sharpness, and is therefore resorted to in cases of invalids whose complaints do not affect their respiration, as with the latter class the general prevalence of cold and damp is apt to render their stay there perilous. For these, nothing can be more suitable than a mild, equitable climate in some rural situation in the interior.

4th. “Cleanliness is next to godliness.” Where the goddess is Hygeia, (the Deity of Health) it does indeed form one of the composites in the “trinity.” This may be considered in two classes or divisions—cleanliness of house and surroundings, and cleanliness of person. Of the first perhaps we need say little; the customs of society require a person to conform to the external decencies of life to a great extent—his domestic appurtenances are so much subject to public, or at least neighborly inspection, that fear of exposure and indictment as a public nuisance, for gathering and hoarding under the folds of that larger garment—his house—an offensive amount of filth, usually render him circumspect. But there is perhaps, a greater, because more effectually concealed, disregard of purity, and contingent source of disease, in the little attention paid to cleanliness beneath the immediate clothing of a person, which no public touch or friendly word exposes. People carry about with them a foul and pestilential presence, and within it the seeds for many of the fevers, epidemics and contagious diseases which devastate our world—while a daily, or even a weekly ablution, sheathing them in an armor of water, like a pure mail of diamonds, would render them invulnerable; and immediately after, brisk friction with a coarse or crash towel applied to the whole surface, till the skin begins to grow red, and assumes an agreeable glow.

5th. Nothing conduces more to health than a degree of abstinence and plain food.

The apothecary is chiefly employed to counteract the cook and vintner. Nature delights in the plainest and simplest diet.

CANCERS.

A cancer is one of the most loathsome diseases the human family are subject to. Cancer is caused by a virulent poison in the fluids—it is really the worst development of Scrofula—generally developing itself in the advance stages of life, at some particular change in the system, such as change of life, etc. Frequent exposures to heats and colds are probably not unfrequent causes of cancer development. The symptoms of cancer in the Breast are a puckered condition of the skin, sometimes it is discolored, at first; at other times not until it has advanced considerably; it has a knotty and rough appearance. The discharge of a cancer is of a watery nature, its odor most intolerable. At times it forms a hard tumour or scirrhus—is considered as the occult or primary stage of cancer, and is not an unfrequent consequence of inflammation, when it has attacked or occupied glands. The part becomes of increased size, is knotty, hard, and irregular to the touch—being, however, unattended with any discoloration of the skin—and acute pains are every now and then felt darting through the tumor. At length a tendency to cancerous ulceration becomes obvious.

A cancer is an ulcer of the very worst kind, with an uneven surface, and ragged and painful edges, which spreads in a very rapid manner, discharges a thin, acrimonious matter, that excoriates the neighboring integuments, and usually has a very fetid smell, and which is generally preceded by a hard or scirrhus swelling of the part, if glandular. The disease is most commonly confined to glands, and particularly the breasts, now and then to be met with in the uterus, the face, and other parts, such as the lower lip, the angles of the eyes, the organs of vision, the tongue, etc.

The cancerous sore is extremely irregular; on its surface are seen various prominences and excavations, from one or more of which a hæmorrhage is frequently observed to proceed. It is attended with a peculiarly burning and lancinating pain, which is generally intermittent. The edges are thick, indurated, and often exquisitely painful; they are sometimes retorted, most generally inverted.

Cancer often begins with a surface developed on the face, and is very small and slow in its progress; and rough, scaly, and itchy. It will continue for a great many years without much injury, and sooner or later it will destroy life. It cannot be taken in hand too quick—be sure you do not tamper with it, but overcome it speedily, for by such treatment as cutting with a knife and similar resorts for cure, only aggravates, and develops the cancer faster, making it far more difficult to cure by natural means.

☞ The watery vapor in the air we breathe is supposed to be twenty ounces per day, thus the importance of fresh air.

Most people are the best judges of their own constitution, and know what kind and proportion of food agrees with them best. We would here, however, avow a decided preference for vegetable in opposition to animal food, as a means of health.

"Man's rich with little, were his judgment true ;
Nature is frugal, and her wants are few ;
Those few wants answered, bring delights,
But fools create themselves new appetites."

Man should content himself with the produce of the fields, the gardens, and dairy.

It appears very evident that man, in his primeval state of simplicity, never ate any animal food whatever. Vegetables alone seem to have been his only food. From this fact we may infer, that vegetable is more congenial to the system than animal food. We may infer this also from the effects which follow the long continued use of meat. Sailors who use it on long voyages are scurvy subjects, which often proves fatal, when a recurrence to vegetables immediately removes the disease. A vast number of other complaints are unquestionably produced by animal food. The evil consequences arising from it are in part owing to the quantities of grease it contains, by reason of which the digestion is disordered, the bile vitiated, the blood corrupted, and cutaneous and other diseases induced.

The blood of the person who eats animal food is richer, thicker, and more stimulating, and produces a much greater excitement of the different organs, than the blood of those fed on vegetables. Flesh diet, therefore, gives a greater tendency to inflammatory and other complaints than a vegetable diet.

Among other ill effects of animal food, is a temporary fever after eating, called by the old medical writers, "the fever of digestion." No such effects follow the use of vegetable food.

That man is capable of sustaining the health, vigor and strength of his system upon a diet purely vegetable, is established by so many proofs as to place the fact beyond a possibility of doubt. The Hindo lives almost exclusively on rice and water. A great portion of the Irish peasantry subsist on potatoes, with the addition of oaten cake or bread and milk; and the laboring classes, in many districts of Scotland and north of England, are nourished upon little else than oatmeal and potatoes; while in various other countries of Europe, the poor are restricted almost exclusively to a vegetable diet, even less nourishing than these. When the food just referred to, is in sufficient quantity and of a good quality, more robust, active and vigorous frames, and a greater amount of general health, can scarcely be met with in the inhabitants of any country, or among any other classes of society, whatever may be the nature of their diet. Vegetable food affords as much or more nutrition than animal, while the former produces much less excitement.

Costiveness is very hurtful to health; therefore care should be taken to remove it at the beginning by cool, gentle purges.

Obstructed perspiration (commonly called catching cold) is the great source of diseases. Let it therefore be removed immediately by gentle sweats.

Physic, for the most part, is only a substitute for exercise and temperance.

6th. All malt liquors and ardent spirits are hurtful; we surely need not reiterate proofs of the evils of this form of intemperance. Each for himself may accumulate instances by hundreds.

The use of strong tea and coffee, and tobacco, are highly deleterious—the use of tobacco especially which has become so prevalent in this country, that in some places a large majority of both sexes, above fifteen years of age, either snuff, smoke or chew it. The same habits prevail to a great extent in almost every portion of the globe.

In conclusion, let us offer the following advice, in some instances a review of what we have before said, but valuable enough, we venture to imagine, to suffer nothing from repetition.

A due regard of life is, not to eat any such things as disagree with the stomach, nor eat and drink more than the stomach can easily digest.

Some old epicures insist that it is requisite they should eat and drink a great deal, in order to keep up their natural health and strength; and that were they to lead a temperate life, it would be but a short one; but large quantities of food can never be easily digested by young or feeble stomachs.

Old people should eat often, and in small portions.

Masticate or chew the food well. Eat slow. Drink no hot liquors. Meals should be taken at regular intervals, and as nearly as possible at six hours apart and nothing between them. And none just before going to bed.

Abstinence should be preferred to medicine. It is beneficial to omit a meal occasionally, particularly if a little unwell. No naps should be taken after dinner. Sleeping apartments should be well ventilated; but no current of air should come directly upon the bed. All bedclothes to be well aired. No corsets or tight clothes should be worn. Flannels should be taken off on going to bed. It is much better to wear muslin than linen; it preserves a more uniform temperature. Bathe daily, or at farthest, weekly. Ablution or bathing the body is a good substitute for the shower bath; if the skin is very foul there is nothing so good as a vapor bath; it purifies and beautifies the skin, cures all cutaneous diseases. My Patent Vapor Bath is acknowledged by all, the ne plus ultra. Exercise in the open air is very necessary. Feather beds are very injurious, especially in the summer season; straw or hair mattresses should be substituted. Avoid over-exertion and fatigue as much as indolence. Avoid a stream of air while in a state of perspiration, as you would an arrow. Avoid fretting and scolding and corroding care. Avoid the crowded party, ball-room and theatre.

Your regimen ought to be simple and inartificial. Drink only the simple water; it is the beverage of nature, and not by any means, nor in any way to be improved by art. No spirits whatever are half so salutary. It is stronger than the strongest wine, purer than the virgin honey, and sweeter than the sweetest nectar.

CANCER OF THE STOMACH.

Cancer often locates in the stomach; it being at the vitals, it is rather hard to reach. In this, as in cancer of the womb, is the Indian Cancer Fluid particularly adapted. The person with this development of cancer will feel distressed after eating, often will vomit food, can eat but little, sharp pains at times in stomach, or at other times a tenderness of it, streaks of blood are often spit up with the food, countenance becomes pale, system generally emaciated, blood low and watery. Physicians often mistake this for dyspepsia, and in many cases it is allowed to go so far, under such a belief, that it usually becomes incurable. This form of cancer can be cured if taken in season. It may be considered the worst place in the whole system to form a cure, yet with good and efficient remedies it can be thoroughly subdued, and by absorption it can all be taken up and out of the blood.

☞ Diphtheria is caused from a specific contagion and cancer.

CANCER OF THE WOMB

May be detected from the peculiar discharge it emits from the uterus. It is most directly before menstruating and immediately after it being a discharge of watery matter, it is acid and offensive in the extreme; the pains are sharp and piercing at times through the parts, at other times quite free from pain. There is more pain, as a general thing, from a week to eight days before menstruation. This cancerous discharge can be distinguished from most any other by its leaving a dark stain upon the linen that will not wash out. As it increases in size the pain becomes harder and more frequent. The abdomen becomes enlarged and tender to the touch, often eating, through the womb and bowels, and causing the worst of suffering. Thus a poor subject of humanity is destroyed, or eaten up, little by little, until death finally relieves them of all their pain. People are often deceived, either purposely or ignorantly, by the physician, until help is out of reach. A person should not allow themselves to be deceived in this way by incompetent physicians, in this particular form of disease.

☞ There is one-third more cases of consumption in females than in males.

LUMBAR ABSCESSSES.

SYMPTOMS.—By these terms are understood chronic collections of matter, which form in the cellular substance of the loins. The matter is formed slowly and imperceptibly, and occasions at first no manifest swelling nor fluctuation. When the matter has collected it spreads until it has reached the origin of the psoas muscle, which passes into ulceration, and forms a bag, surrounded by a complete ring. In a few instances the matter causes a swelling in the vicinity of the spine; and, less frequently still, it makes its way through the abdominal muscles, and produces a tumor at some part of the abdomen.

CAUSES.—The causes of a psoas abscess are frequently involved in great obscurity. It is supposed sometimes to arise from injuries done to the back and loins, by severe twists, blows, &c.; at other times to proceed from sudden exposure to cold after severe exercise, particularly in scrofulous habits.

Forget not to mingle moderation and abstinence even with the holiest rites of wedlock. A proper and habitual restraint in conjugal pleasure is like incense to the flames of the altar. So far from quenching, it cherishes and improves the heavenly fire. Healthy, happy, vigorous and beautiful are the offspring of chaste and rational love.

Study to acquire a composure of mind and body. Avoid agitation and hurry of one or the other, especially just before and after meals, and while the progress of digestion is going on. To this end, govern your temper—endeavor to look at the bright side of things—keep down, as much as possible, the unruly passions—discard envy, hatred and malice, and lay your head on your pillow in charity to all mankind. Let not your wants outrun your means. Whatever difficulties you have to encounter, be not perplexed, but only think what is right to do in the sight of Him who seeth all things, and bear the result without repining.

“ If I were asked,” says a writer, “ on what conditions health and purity depend, I should reply, active exercise, attractive industry, and healthful employment for body and mind.”

It is only in obedience to these constitutional laws, fixed and immutable as the laws of the planetary world, which a wise and benevolent Creator has established in our nature, that life and health can be secured.

According as a man shapes his destiny, so it is; as man makes his condition, so he makes his life. Be sure the conscientious balance within harmonizes with the outer form, then you will enjoy that which is harmonious and equal. As it is with him that seeks low company, so will be the conditions or the magnetic surroundings of life felt; if otherwise, he seek good substantial society with plenty of natural refinement, so will he feel lifted, elevated and directed; his house, (or earthly tenement,) will be filled with much happiness. Shape then, your life here, Oh! man, for a true and harmonious condition, that the hope for the future may find a more firm resting place in thy heart.

“ There are a number of us creep
Into this world to eat and sleep ;
And know no reason why the're born.
But merely to consume the corn,
Devour the cattle, fowl, and fish,
And leave behind an empty dish.
Though crows and ravens do the same,
Unlucky birds of hateful name,
Ravens or crows might fill their places,
And swallow corn and eat carcasses.
Then if their tombstones, when they die,
Be n't taught to flatter and to lie,
There's nothing better will be said,
Than that they've eat up all their bread,
Drunk all their drink and gone to bed.”

I have carefully compounded, under my own direction, one hundred and twenty-five different compounds, or different Scientific Indian Remedies, and are made from purely vegetable productions, some of them having as high as thirty different ingredients in them. I challenge their equal.

Any of the following remedies will be sent to the person ordering them, by inclosing in the order the amount of money as marked in this book for the remedy wanted. No letter will be answered unless a stamp be enclosed. Any person that gets help or a cure by them would oblige me, as well as the afflicted, by sending me a written statement of it, that it may serve as a guide to those suffering from a similar disease.

INDIAN CANCER PLASTER, NO. 1,

For the removal of obstinate humors and ulcerated cancers. It is entirely free from poison, and has power to dissolve the many thousand roots which supply this "Hydra-headed monster." While having no effect on anything not cancerous in its nature, it will at the same time, while proceeding to draw out the real cancer by the roots, institute the process of healing over the consequent sore. This healing process, however, will not commence until the virus of the cancer is entirely exterminated. The ingredients used in the preparations of this plaster render superfluous the application of caustic, the usual method of procedure of many pretended cancer physicians. Boxes in various sizes. Prices from $10.00 to $20.00 per box.

INDIAN CANCER PLASTER, NO. 2,

A Vegetable Plaster, made from expressed juices, acting differently from Plaster No. 1, and used in cases where it is considered expedient. Price from $10.00 to $20.00 per box.

INDIAN CANCER PLASTER, NO. 3,

Is used to destroy fungus flesh, and good flesh that centres about cancers, rendering the roots of it, beyond the reach of the other Cancer Plasters, unless this is removed. This is only a preparatory remedy for the other Plasters. This Plaster is not sold, but used at the office under my own direction.

INDIAN CANCER FLUID.

A Blood Purifier, made from the pure expressed juice of Roots, as taken from the field. Taken internally, it operates directly upon the blood, assisting the cancer plasters to dissolve the minute roots. It reaches cases of internal cancer with happy results. Price, $1.50 per bottle.

☞ The average weight of an adult's heart is from seven to twelve ounces.

CONSUMPTION.

SYMPTOMS.—This disease may arise from inflammation of the mucous or lining membrane, or external parts of the lungs; and also from tubercles.

The incipient symptoms usually vary with the cause of the disease; but when it arises from tubercles,* it is usually thus marked: It begins with a short, dry cough that at length becomes habitual, but from which nothing is spit up for some time except frothy mucus. The breathing is at the same time somewhat impeded, and upon the least bodily motion is much hurried; a sense of straitness, with oppression at the chest, is experienced; the body becomes gradually leaner, and great languor, with indolence, dejection of spirits, and loss of appetite prevail. In this state the patient frequently continues a considerable length of time, during which he is however, more readily affected than usual by slight colds; and upon one or other of these occasions the cough becomes more troublesome and severe, particularly by night, and it is at length attended with an expectoration, which toward morning is more free and copious.

CAUSES.—The causes which produce this afflicting and extensive malady, which may emphatically be called consumption, are very numerous. The following are the most general:—Hereditary disposition, particular formation of the body—obvious by a long neck, prominent shoulders and narrow chest; scrofula, or state of the system indicated by a fine, clear skin, fair hair, delicate, rosy complexion, large veins, thick upper lip, a weak voice, and great sensibility; certain diseases, such as venereal, scrofula, the small pox, and measles; particular employments, exposing artificers to dust, such as needle-pointers, stone-cutters, millers, &c., or to the fumes of metals or minerals under a confined and unwholesome air; violent passions, exertions, or affections of the mind, as grief, disappointment, anxiety or close application to study without using proper exercise; frequent and excessive debaucheries, late watching, and drinking freely of strong liquors; great evacuations, as diarrhœa, diabetes, &c.

* Tubercles are small, hard, round knots or tumours situated in different parts of the lungs, (generally at the upper part.) and their number varies much. In their incipient stages they are no larger than a fine shot, but finally increase and become as large as a nut. They often exist in clusters, and, if numerous, run into each other and form hard, yellow masses like cartilage. At length, from cold, or other causes, they soften and are changed into a cream color, inflame, break, and open into the bronchial tubes, and are discharged by expectoration. They form open ulcers, from which great quantities of matter issue, and sometimes blood; they depend upon a strumous or scrofulous state of the system. Tubercles will sometimes exist for many years even to old age, without very serious inconvenience. By regularity, temperance, diet, &c., they may be prevented from doing much injury; otherwise they soon cause consumption.

INFLAMMATION OF THE SPLEEN.

SYMPTOMS.—It is characterized by fever, tension, heat, tumor, and pain in the left side, increased by pressure. This disease comes on with a remarkable shivering, succeeded by a most intense heat and very great thirst; a pain and tumor are perceived in the left side, and the paroxysms for the most part assume a quartan form; when the patients expose themselves for a little to the free air, their extremities immediately grow very cold. If a hæmorrhage happens, the blood flows out of the left nostril. The other symptoms are the same as those of inflammation of the liver. Like the liver, the spleen is also subject to a chronic inflammation, which often happens after agues, and is called the "ague cake," though that name is also frequently given to a scirrhus tumor of the liver succeeding intermittents.

CAUSES.—The causes of this disease are the same as those of other inflammatory disorders; but those which determine the inflammation to that particular part more than to any other, are very much unknown, excepting cold. It attacks persons of a very plethoric and sanguine habit of body rather than others.

Not one case of cancer out of a hundred is ever cured by the use of the knife.

INFLAMMATION OF THE BOWELS.

SYMPTOMS.—This dangerous and painful disease is characterized by acute pain in the bowels, which is much increased upon pressure, and shoots round the navel in a twisting manner; there is obstinate costiveness, tension of the belly, and the vomiting generally bilious, or dark and fetid; the urine is high colored, the pulse quick, hard, and contracted, with some degree of febrile heat, thirst, and great depression or loss of strength. The patient is constantly belching up wind, and in protracted cases he even discharges excrement by the mouth, the motion of the intestines becoming inverted from their being no passage downward.

CAUSES.—An inflammation of the intestines is occasioned by long continued costiveness or hardened feculent matter lodged in some part of the tube; by the strangulation of a protruded portion of the gut in a rupture; by preceding colic; eating unripe fruits or great quantities of nuts, and by scirrhus tumours of the intestines, or strictures; but the most frequent cause is exposure to cold, particularly when applied to the lower extremities or bowels, and occasionally by cold drinks swallowed when the body is much heated by exercise.

The small intestines in a man are about twenty feet long and one inch in diameter.

ENLARGEMENT OF THE HEART.

SYMPTOMS.—When there are chronic enlargements, or some real disease of the heart, the following symptoms are present: Palpitation is generally a very prominent symptom; but this may proceed from dyspepsia or debility; there is shortness of breath, particularly from exertion; pain, and a sensation of tightness or stricture of the chest, and pain over the region of the heart; difficulty of laying in a recumbent position, and sudden startings up; a little fatigue, as walking fast, or going up stairs, will occasion distress; the feet begin to swell, the strength fails, the pulse sometimes intermits, the countenance, particularly around the mouth, assumes a pale, haggard appearance, and there is sometimes paroxysms of pain, which are very distressing; in one of these the subject of the disease is liable to be suddenly snatched away. By placing the hand over the region of the heart a great beating of that organ may usually be felt. Most of these are peculiar, however, to water around the heart, and some of them consequent on dyspepsia. The symptoms occur periodically.

CAUSES.—Whatever weakens the heart may have a tendency to bring on these symptoms; also great excitement of the mind, intemperance in eating and drinking, venereal excesses, &c.

 The average amount of blood in an adult is from thirty to forty pounds, or from four to six gallons.

SALT RHEUM.

This is a troublesome, inveterate eruption, appearing on different parts of the body, usually the hands. Very small eruptions or vesicles appear, which break and discharge a thin, ichorous, or corrosive fluid, that causes a very great degree of irritation or itching, afterward scabs often form upon the part affected, which, though they be rubbed off or dry away, will reappear after awhile.

It is attended with more or less inflammation and swelling; and such is the degree of itching some times attending it, that the patient is obliged to scratch continually, to obtain the least relief. The whole hands or parts occasionally become excoriated, stiff, and almost immovable. It seems to be located principally underneath the skin; although, from its disappearing in one part, and then appearing in another, it is evident that the disease is located in the vascular system of the blood. It appears to be occasioned by a retention of morbid humours, which are thrown to the surface, and which the system seems unable entirely to expel. It is a species of scrofula.

 In children and youth we sleep ten or twelve hours out of twenty four. In maturity we find from seven to eight hours sufficient; in old age can do with less.

INDIAN VEGETABLE FEMALE PILLS,

Will without injury remove Chlorosis, or retention of the menses, Amenorrhœa, or suppression of menses, and all obstructions of the menstrual discharge from any cause.

We have sold several thousand boxes of these pills, none complaining of their not doing as they are recommended, they act in perfect harmony with the constitution and laws of life. This is one of the surest remedies now before the public, that has given such entire satisfaction in removing the above complaints.

The descending vena cava, returning black blood from the head and upper extremities. o The ascending vena cava, returning the same kind of blood from the lower parts of the body. n The right auricle of the heart, where both veins meet. p and x, veins from the liver, spleen, and bowels, uniting with the inferior cava.

The auricle being filled, contracts and forces the blood into b, the ventricle; next the ventricle contracts and sends it to k the pulmonary artery, which branches into ll. to supply the lungs on both sides of the chest. From the lungs, where a scarlet color has been given it, four veins of the lungs gather it together, and deposite it in the left auricle. r; that contracts and the blood is driven into the left ventricle, a; lastly, the ventricle contracts and throws it into c, the aorta, which conducts it over and through every bone, muscle, and organ.

ASTHMA.

CAUSES.—Asthma, but more particularly the spasmodic, is brought on by almost everything which increases the action of the heart, and which stimulates and fills the vessels of the mucous membrane. Thus it is produced by intense heat, lightness of air, severe exercise, strong mental emotions, full meals, stimulating drinks, exposure to cold and atmospherical influence, and by certain effluvia, as those of hay, whether new or old, of sealing-wax, and other burning substances.

Congestions of blood, or of serous humours in the lungs, noxious vapours arising from a decomposition of lead or arsenic, impure and smoky air, cold and foggy atmosphere, sudden changes of temperature, scrofulous, rheumatic, gouty, and scorbutic taints; dyspepsia, or irritation in some of the organs, suppression of long-accustomed evacuations, frequent catarrhal attacks, gout, general debility, water in the chest, aneurisms, polypi, or concretions of grumous blood in the large vessels, are the causes from which this formidable disease may arise in different individuals. In some instances it proceeds from an hereditary predisposition, and in others from mal-conformation of the chest.

SYMPTOMS.—There is often some degree of warning given of the approach of an asthmatic paroxysm, not by pulmonary symptoms, but by those of indigestion heartburn, wind, itching of the skin, pain over the eyes, and sleepiness. The attack most commonly occurs at night, and the patient is perhaps awakened out of his sleep by it. To those who experience or witness a paroxysm of asthma for the first time, it appears one of the most formidable diseases to which man is liable. The patient is oppressed by a tightness across the breast, which so impedes respiration as to threaten the immediate extinction of life. He starts up into an erect posture, and flies to the window for air. For a considerable time his breathing is performed by gasps, slowly and with a wheezing noise; speaking is difficult, and even painful to him; there is often present also a propensity to coughing.

In this state of urgent distress, the patient continues till the approach of morning, when a remission commonly takes place. However suddenly the fit began, it always goes off slowly. By degrees the breathing becomes less laborious, and coughing and speaking are performed with greater ease. In the generality of cases a copious expectoration of mucus at length takes place, and with it the paroxysm ceases, and the patient falls asleep.

☞ Two thirds of the incurable cases of Insanity are caused by self pollution.

INFLAMMATION OF THE EAR.

SYMPTOMS.—When the ear is inflamed the pain is very acute, attended with more or less fever, and sometimes delirium. Swelling and redness is often perceived externally, attended with throbbing; suppuration occasionally takes place when a copious discharge of matter follows.

CAUSES.—An inflammation of the ear is usually brought on by exposing the ear to a partial current of air. It may arise from cutting the hair of the head very short, particularly in the winter; or any exposure.

CAUSES.—Sometimes it arises from the use of spiritous liquors, debility, cold, diuretic medicines, poor diet, depressing passions, an impoverished state of the blood, etc.; it is thought to be occasioned by a perverted or diseased action of the kidneys.

☞ A Dyspeptic person is better off with half a meal than he would be with a whole one.

CROUP.

SYMPTOMS.—The symptoms of this complaint are, difficulty of breathing, and a peculiar whistling noise. It is attended with a cough, which generally increases until it becomes very troublesome. It occurs in proxysms, which agitate the whole frame; great thirst, restlessness, and expectoration of mucus, which is raised with a great deal of difficulty. The head is thrown back in great agony, as if attempting to escape suffocation. The cough is generally dry; but if anything is spit up, it has either a purulent appearance, or seems to consist of films resembling portions of a membrane. Where great nausea and frequent retchings prevail, coagulated matter of the same nature is brought up. There is an uneasy sense of heat over the whole body, a continual inclination to change from place to place, and frequency of the pulse. Very often the symptoms differ considerably, and sudden remissions and exacerbations take place.

CAUSES.—The usual causes of croup are, cold, exposure to a damp atmosphere, and whatever checks perspiration. It prevails chiefly in winter and spring.

CHRONIC INFLAMMATION OF THE BRONCHIA.

This is often the result of acute bronchitis. It is characterized by a troublesome cough, attended with a copious expectoration of viscid, purulent, or a whitish frothy matter; uneasy and somewhat oppressed respiration, accompanied at times with wheezing; more or less weight and uneasiness at the pit of the stomach; loss of appetite; a slightly furred tongue; irregular action of the bowels; a quick and irritated pulse, particularly towards evening; a deep red and scanty urine. The coughing usually occurs in fits of considerable violence, being almost always most severe in the mornings on rising from bed, or in passing from warm to a cold air. Sudden atmospheric vicissitudes also seldom fail to increase the violence and frequency of the spells of coughing; and the same effect is usually produced by the inhalation of various vapors, fine dust, and occasionally by the act of swallowing food. Sometimes slight transient pains are felt in the chest; but more frequently no painful sensations whatever are experienced, except immediately after a fit of coughing, when a general aching pain is left for a few moment in the breast.

CAUSES.—Chronic inflammation of the mucous membrane of the bronchia may occur as the sequel of acute bronchitis. It most commonly, however, arises from neglected catarrh. It is the consequence sometimes of measles, of hepatic diseases, and of protracted disorders primarily located in the digestive organs. It may proceed directly from the vicissitudes of heat and cold, and from the inhalation of irritating vapors or particles of matter floating in the atmosphere. It occasionally occurs in consequence of whooping-cough, particularly from taking cold while under the influence of this affection.

☞ The average amount of air inhaled at one inspiration is from 75 to 150 cubic inches.

COLDS AND COUGHS.

SYMPTOMS—A cold is usually accompanied with a weight and pain in the head, oppression at the chest, and some difficulty of breathing; a sense of fulness and stopping of the nose, watery inflamed eyes, soreness of the throat, cough, pains about the chest, cold shiverings, succeeded by transient flushes of heat, pains in the neck and other parts of the body, an increased secretion of mucus from the nose, throat, and lungs, in consequence of a slight inflammation of the mucous membrane of these parts, and in many instances with some degree of fever.

A cough is generally the effect of a cold which has been improperly treated or entirely neglected. When it proves obstinate, there is always reason to fear the consequences, as this shows a weak state of the lungs, and is often the forerunner of consumption.

CAUSES.—The application of cold to the body giving a check to perspiration, is the general cause of these complaints.

DROPSY OF THE WOMB.

It is sometimes the case that there is a collection of water or hydatids in the womb. A tumor appears over the region, which gradually increases, and somewhat resembles the figure of it. It yields upon pressure, and there is a sense of fluctuation. There is not much, if any, diminution of urine. It is distinguished from the dropsy of the abdomen by its being confined to the region of the uterus.

This disease is soon followed by general dropsy, a slow fever, and emaciation.

☞ Period of Gestation, nine months, forty-two weeks, or two hundred and ninety-four days, from cessation of menses.

INSANITY, OR MENTAL DERANGEMENT.

DESCRIPTION.—INSANITY or mania may be termed a false perception of things, displayed most generally in the opinion formed by the patient of his nearest friends, or things in general ; in a want of due connexion of the train of thoughts marked by an incoherence or raving ; and in a resistance of the passions to the command of the will, accompanied, for the most part, with a violence of action and furious resentment at restraint. Every species of madness, whether it has originated in the mind or the body, becomes the same by continuance. In madness both the mind and the body must ultimately be diseased ; for a disease of the mind soon produces one of the body.

Mania comes on at different periods of life ; but in the greater number of cases it makes its first attack between the ages of thirty and forty.

CAUSES.—Among the various causes of mental derangement, we may enumerate certain local diseases, such as enlargement of the bones, tumours, and dropsy of the brain. Certain diseases of the brain also, such as palsy, epilepsy, apoplexy, headache, &c., gout, dropsy, consumption, pregnancy, and febrile diseases, profuse evacuations from bleeding, mercury, or other causes. Perhaps the most fertile of all causes of insanity is the use of ardent spirits. Another cause of insanity is, inordinate sexual desires. Dyspepsia is probably one of the most frequent causes of insanity.

A very common practice among young men and women, called onanism, is another cause of the disease. Also great pain, great labour or exercise, very hot or cold weather, and narcotic substances taken into the stomach, may produce it. Worms, foreign matters retained in irritable parts of the body, translations of morbid humours to the brain, hysterics, cutaneous eruptions, measles, inordinate ambition, intense study, and the passions, such as joy, terror, love, fear, grief shame, may likewise be enumerated among the various causes of insanity. It frequently arises from defamation, calumny, ridicule, loss of property and beauty, and domestic quarrels.

☞ Tight lacing is frequently the cause of Female Weakness and premature Consumption.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LUNGS.

SYMPTOMS.—Inflammation of the lungs comes on with an obtuse pain in the chest or side, great difficulty in breathing, (particularly in a recumbent position, or when lying on the side affected,) together with a cough, dryness of the skin, heat, anxiety and thirst. At the first commencement of the disease the pulse is usually full, strong, hard, and frequent; but in a more advanced stage it is commonly weak, soft, and often irregular. In the beginning the cough is frequently dry and without expectoration; but in some cases it is moist even from the first, and the matter spit up is various both in colour and in consistence, and is often streaked with blood.

When pneumonia proves fatal, it is generally by an effusion of blood taking place in the cellular texture of the lungs, so as to occasion suffocation, which usually happens between the third and seventh days; but it may likewise prove fatal, by terminating either in suppuration or gangrene, the evacuation which most frequently terminates the complaint, and which does it with the greatest effect, is a free and copious expectoration of thick white or yellow matter, slightly streaked with blood; and by this the disease is carried off generally in the course of ten or twelve days.

CAUSES.—The most general cause of this disease is the application of cold to the body, which gives a check to the perspiration, and determines a great flow of blood to the lungs. It attacks principally those of a robust constitution and plethoric habit, and occurs most frequently in the winter season and spring of the year; but it may arise in either of the other seasons, when there are sudden vicissitudes from heat to cold.

Other causes, such as violent exertions in singing, speaking, or playing on wind instruments, by producing an increased action of the lungs, have been known to occasion inflammation of this organ. Those who have labored under a former attack of this complaint are much predisposed to returns of it.

☞ In healthy women the menstruation should last from four to five days.

INFLAMMATION OF THE KIDNEYS.

SYMPTOMS.—This disorder is characterized by an acute, pungent, or more frequently an obtuse or dull pain in the region of the kidneys, shooting along the course of the ureters, or ducts which convey the urine from them into the bladder; pain also in the small of the back, together with a fever, and frequent discharge of urine, which is small in quantity, red, and high colored.

CAUSES.—The causes which produce this complaint are external contusions, strains of the back, acrids conveyed to the kidneys in the course of the circulation, violent and severe exercise either in riding or walking, calculous concretions lodged in the kidneys or ureters, and exposure to cold.

This disease sometimes assumes a chronic form, known by heat, pain, etc., over the loins.

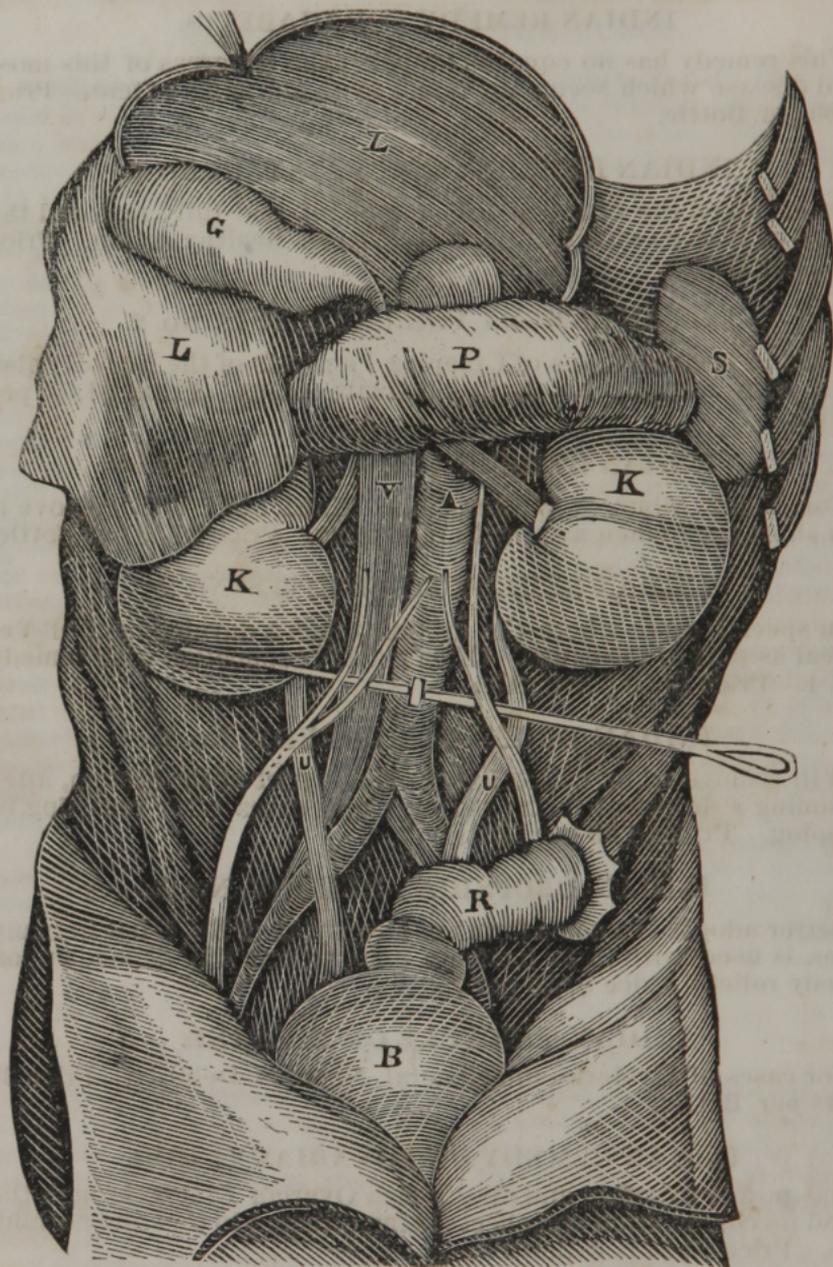

FIG. 14. THE ABDOMEN AFTER REMOVAL OF THE INTESTINES.

The letters LLLL point out the inferior surface of the liver, a little raised from its natural position, to show the gall-bladder G, and the pancreas P P, round the right end of which the duodenum is curved. S indicates the spleen, with a vacant space over it, in which the stomach lies. The kidneys K K lie one on each side of the spine; and the two pipes U U are the ureters, which convey the urine into the bladder. V V, vena cava. R, rectum. B, bladder. P P, pancreas or sweetbread.

The foregoing remedies published in this book, are all scientificallly compounded by myself in person, and are free from mineral poisons. They are warranted not to injure the most delicate constitution! are nature's own remedies acting as food as well as medicine. Each remedy is peculiarly adapted to the specific complaints, directing its whole power upon the organic disease for which it is intended. Thus changing the predisposition and bringing about a harmonious condition of the system, and are not like so many popular remedies of the day, where one kind of medicine cures all diseases. Any of these will be sent by mail or express, on remittance of the price affixed to them.

No liquid medicines can be sent by mail. In all cases the transportation must be paid by the person ordering them; if for any dry medicines to be sent by mail, there must be stamps enough to pay the postage, or money extra, or the orders will not be filled. All orders directed to DR. H. W. LIBBEY, Cleveland, Ohio, will receive prompt attention; if a letter is confidential, and marked as such, the strictest observance of it will be made. Those people that have been in the habit of using these remedies will see that they are all marked fifty per cent. higher than usual; this is owing to advance on them before they are manufactured. All persons wishing to avail themselves of my treatment of Baths, in connection with remedies, and my personal attention, can do so by consulting me by mail; prices for board, baths, and treatment can be agreed upon in this way. To this class of patients, the best that can be, will be done for their accommodation—comfort and personal attention—until they recover their health.

Any one wishing for more reference than I give them here, to any special case, I will be happy to send it to them, any distance, free of charge. All private diseases treated strictly confidential.

No letter of inquiry noticed unless a stamp be enclosed. People so negligent of their business never should receive an answer. So that all who fail to hear from me can blame themselves. I cannot spend time and pay postage to letters of inquiry.

Any person or persons wishing for the Indian Hygieina can have it sent them free of charge by giving me their address. In all cases you would oblige me by reading carefully, and either sending it to some of your afflicted friends and neighbors, or send their names to me, so that I can mail them one. Often in such cases a person can be instrumental in doing an incalculable amount of good.

PLEURISY.

SYMPTOMS.—This, like most other forms of fever, begins with chilliness and shivering, which are followed by heat, thirst, inquietude, and the other common symptoms of fever. After a few hours the patient is seized with a violent pricking pain in one of his sides, commonly about the short ribs, which sometimes extends itself toward the back-bone, sometimes toward the shoulder-bone, and toward the fore part of the breast; and this is attended with frequent coughing.

The matter which the patient spits up is at first small in quantity, thin, and mixed with particles of blood; but as the disease advances, it is more plentiful and more purulent, but seldom without a mixture of blood. The pulse is remarkably strong, and seems to vibrate like the tense string of a musical instrument; and the blood drawn from a vein, as soon as it is cold, looks like melted suet. Sometimes there is little or no expectoration, and hence pleurisies are distinguished into moist and dry.

CAUSES.—Its causes are cold applied to the skin; sudden and great distention of the pleura in drawing breath; drinking cold liquors after being heated by violent exercise; cold, northerly winds; sleeping without doors, on the damp ground; wet clothes; plunging the body into cold water, or exposing it to the cold air, in a state of perspiration. Generally speaking, whatever obstructs perspiration may occasion the pleurisy. It may also be produced by drinking strong liquors; stopping issues, ulcers, sweating of the feet or hands, or other usual evacuations; the sudden striking in of the small-pox, measles, or any eruption. It may also be brought on by violent exercise, as running, leaping, wrestling, lifting heavy burdens, blows on the breast, &c.

☞ A laboring man requires from two to two and a half pounds of solid food a day to keep him in health.

VERTIGO.

DESCRIPTION.—Vertigo or dizziness is generally symptomatic of some other complaint, such as dyspepsia, and hypochondria; or it may be a premonitory symptom of apoplexy, or over-determination of blood to the head.

SYMPTOMS.—The patient is suddenly seized with a sense of swimming in the head; everything appears to him to turn round: he staggers; and is in danger of falling down. This complaint is attended with very little danger where it arises from hysterics, or any nervous disorder; but when it arises from plethora, or an unnatural quantity of blood in the head, there is danger of apoplexy.

This complaint often proceeds from difficult or obstructed menstruation.

☞ A woman may conceive while nursing and still have a regular menstrual visitation.

I give a few Certificates out of many hundreds I have on hand, hoping to satisfy the public and the afflicted generally, that what I say, I prove. Read and believe ; they all speak for themselves. With such proof, who can doubt ?

Obertin, O.

DR. LIBBEY, Sir :—I take the present opportunity to thank you for your kindness in sending me medicine. I think it has done me a great deal of good. I am better than I have been in twelve years. I can get about very well without my cane ; in fact, I feel about as well as ever. But some of my friends want I should send for more remedies ; it seems to me as though I did not need any more. I work considerably now. I am so much better that some of my friends don't know me when they see me walking along the streets. Some think it is almost a miracle, for many said I never could be cured. I am questioned every day about your treatment medicines, &c. I shall always remember you, and do all I can for you. May heaven smile on you, and length of days be given to you and yours.

Respectfully yours,

C. S. HOPKINS.

Auburn, Geauga Co., Ohio.

DR. LIBBEY, Sir :—I have not forgotten you or your medicines. I cannot forget one that has done the good that you have for me. I think you an earthly Saviour. You have relieved me of sufferings more than any one else. I believe you will cure me yet. Please send me more medicine the first opportunity. Remember your reward is to come. I can walk something over eight rods and back for the first time in ten years. My whole prayers are for you, that you may hold out in health and strength and keep the same course you have begun, for many years to come.

Yours, with great Respect,

ABBIE W. EVERDON.

I would say that the two cases above are those of people I have never seen up to this date, Nov. 10, 1862. I examined and treated them without seeing either, again proving that a patient can be successfully treated at a distance.

Newburgh, Oct. 7.

About two years ago I had a severe attack of Inflamed Sore eyes, finally assuming Scrofula Sore Eyes, tending strongly to Erysipelas. I had them treated for weeks with all the remedies that my friends could advise, at last I became nearly blind. I sent to Dr. Libbey for an examination, which he made correctly. In a few weeks from the time he prescribed his Indian Remedies, the eyes became well, and general health improved. They have been well ever since. At times I discover a slight weakness, probably partly from age, but nothing to be alarmed about. Any one having Sore Eyes, or any Chronic complaint, I think, will receive good and careful treatment if they place themselves under the care of Dr. Libbey.

Oberlin, Lorain Co., O.

I take extreme pleasure in giving the public a knowledge of my case. I consider it very remarkable. For several years I had Rheumatic Dyspepsia and Chronic Diarrhœa. I was reduced in flesh, and crippled so that I resorted to canes, and could not get along without them, and for work, that I could not do for years. My friends knew well my condition. I heard of Dr. Libbey, of Cleveland; I sent my name to him and he described my case accurately, and sent me medicines. Taking into consideration my circumstances, and the fact that in a few months I could walk well, eat well, my flesh became healthy, and can now do a good day's work, and feel well after it, it is indeed wonderful. My friends hardly know me when they see me on the street. What I think singular in this case is, that up to this writing I have not seen the doctor or he me, thus proving that he can cure without seeing the patients. If those afflicted will take my advice, they will place themselves under Dr. Libbey's treatment. He will cure you if he says so. If not, he will tell you, if called upon or consulted by mail. I should be most happy to give my opinion more fully.

C. S. HOPKINS.

We fully concur in the above statement of Mr. Hopkins, being well acquainted with him for many years, and knew his true condition. He now looks as well and hearty as most men in this place.

I hope this statement of my daughter's case may be the means of relief to many sufferers. My daughter, aged about fourteen years, had a white swelling, which assumed its most aggravated form, a fever sore. The suffering it caused is little known except by those who have experienced the affliction. For months our cares and anxious efforts for her relief were beyond description. The first time the swelling was opened it discharged three quarts of acrid matter. We consulted the oldest physicians without any benefit. They stated that the limb must be amputated or it would rot off, and the girl would not survive long. Providentially we heard of Dr. Libbey, and consulted him, and after a thorough examination he pronounced her a curable subject, much to our pleasure. Within four weeks from the time he commenced his treatment, a portion of the thigh bone, of full size and three inches in length was extracted by his cleansing process, and in twelve weeks from the time he first saw her, she was well, the sores all healed, the limb, which was fearfully contracted, made straight, and the action of the limb became so perfect that it soon obtained an equal size with the other. What seems the most remarkable of all is, that the limb is equally as long as the other, notwithstanding the removal of so large a portion of the bone. Her general health is perfectly good.

Some five years ago, I had that disease so common now in this country, called Liver Complaint. It increased yearly, and finally became so bad that I had almost decided that I should never recover. Besides this, about seven or eight months ago, sores came out all over me, and with the other complaint, incapacitated me for work. About this time I heard of Dr. Libbey's success; called upon him, he prescribed for me, and I am now happy to say that I am well. I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. Libbey as one ably skilled to cure Chronic Diseases.

EPILEPSY OR FALLING SICKNESS.

SYMPTOMS.—The epileptic fit, for the most part, occurs suddenly; the patient falls to the ground, and hence the disease has received the appropriate name of the falling sickness. When the complaint is fully established, it is usual for the patient to experience certain warnings of the approach of a fit, which, though lasting only a few seconds, enable him to make some preparations for it. The most frequent of these warning symptoms are, head ache, giddiness, dimness of sight, or flashes of light passing before the eyes, ringing in the ears, and coldness of the extremities. Some persons are apprised of the approach of the fit by the appearance of particular spectres; but the most common of all epileptic warnings is that singular sensation of tremour, or coldness, or numbness, which has been called the aura epileptica. It begins at the extremity of a limb and gradually ascends to the head, when the paroxysm of lethargy and convulsion ensues.

During the fit the convulsive agitations of the body are violent. The eyes are fixed and reverted, and the pupils permanently contracted; the teeth gnash against each other; the tongue is thrust forward, and often severely bitten, and there is foaming at the mouth; the breathing is irregular and laborious; and the pulse, for the most part, small and contracted. Complete insensibility prevails. The fit varies in duration, from a few minutes to a quarter, or even half an hour; in some cases it has lasted even longer. On its cessation the patient remains for some time motionless, insensible, and apparently in a profound sleep. From this he recovers by degrees, but without any recollection of the circumstances of the fit. It leaves him weak and exhausted, and for the rest of the day he generally complains of a degree of stupor and sense of oppression in the head.

CAUSES.—Blows, wounds, fractures, and other injuries done to the head by external violence, together with plethora of the vessels of the head, of water in the brain, tumors, concretions, polypus, and a deformity in the shape of the bones in any interior part of the skull, give rise to this disease. Epilepsy has also been known to arise from an affection of the spinal marrow; and it is to inflammation in that part, of a more chronic form, that those shaking palsies, which are attended with pain, have been imputed. Violent affections of the nervous system, sudden frights, fits of passion, great emotions of the mind, frequent intoxications, acute pains in any part, worms in the stomach or intestines, teething, the suppression of some long-accustomed evacuation, too great emptiness or repletion, and poisons received into the body, are productive of epilepsy. Sometimes it is hereditary.

Norwich, C. W.

DR. LIBBEY, Dear Sir:—It is with pleasure I communicate to you the state of my health, by the use of your Indian Remedies which I got while in Cleveland. They cured me of complaints in the Brain which I was afflicted with for thirty-six years. This I announce to the world with thankfulness to God, the Chief Physician, and give you the highest credit as an instrument in his hands for the good of His creatures. My best respects to you, and shall ever remain your well-wisher.

MRS. E. J. HALL.

About a year and a half ago, I had a severe attack of Bronchitis and Lung Trouble, together with Liver Complaint, and a general prostration of the whole system. I considered myself in a very precarious situation. I called on Dr. Libbey, and through the use of his Indian Remedies I was restored to health, much better than I had been for many years. I must say that I never had any remedies help me so promptly in my life, and if I were to recommend any one particular remedy of his, it would be his Liver Pills No. 1. They act on a person's system splendidly, removing tarry colactions of liver and bilious matter from Stomach and Liver admirably. I can but recommend my friends and all those afflicted with chronic diseases, to try Dr. Libbey's mode of treatment.

Cleveland, Oct. 18, 1862.

MARK RICHARDSON.

Sheffield, Lorain Co., Ohio.

Something about two years ago, I had Dr. Libbey, of Cleveland, make an examination of my case by his new method. I must say it proved correct in every particular. I had Liver complaint, Bronchial affections until I could not speak aloud; my voice was entirely gone, with a strong tendency to Scrofula consumption. I used his remedies for a few weeks, and by them was restored to health, my voice returned and general health improved, so that I am enjoying life once more. I really had but little hope of myself when I called on the doctor; for I had been treated by numerous other physicians without help, I might say, grew worse under their care. Now, out of pity to those suffering with the like complaints or any chronic one, I ask that you will at least try, and get a true diagnosis of your disease, if so, I assure you he can help you if he says so. And let me say further, that he will not flatter you, but tell it just as it is. Such physicians are scarce.

MILO SKINNER.

Youngstown, Oct. 17.

Over a year ago I had a severe attack of Scrofula Sore Eyes. I called on a distinguished Professor of Cleveland. He said he would cure me in two weeks, and from caustic applications and such harsh treatment, he nearly destroyed my sight, and it was with extreme difficulty that I could find my way about. I called on Dr. Libbey of Cleveland; he prescribed his Vegetable Remedies, which were anything but harsh, and am happy to say that in four to six weeks, my eyes became good and healthy, health generally improved. Since then, I have used them with the finest mechanical work without difficulty. Its strange people will persist in being humbugged when they can certainly be cured. I know of none better capable of treating chronic cases than Dr. Libbey. I have seen repeated cases he has cured.

DR. LIBBEY, Dear Sir:—I have not forgotten you or your Remedies; I cannot forget one that has done the good that you have for my child, you have cured it entirely of Scrofula, and the worst case I ever saw. You remember that when I brought it to you, it was scales from head to foot, now it is as smooth and healthy as any child. Again I thank you for saving my darling babe.

I remain yours,

For comfort, convenience, and good arrangement, it is unsurpassed by any.

LIBBEY, 90 and 92, Seneca Street, Cleveland, Ohio.

INFLAMMATION OF THE LIVER.

SYMPTOMS.—The acute species of this complaint comes on with a pain in the right side, extending up to the shoulder, which is much increased by pressing upon the part, and is accompanied with a dry, short, and frequent cough, oppression of breathing, and difficulty of lying on the left side; together with nausea and sickness, and often with a vomiting of bilious matter; tongue coated. The urine is of a deep saffron colour, and small in quantity; there is loss of appetite, great thirst, and costiveness, with a strong, hard, and frequent pulse; and when the disease has continued for some days, the skin and eyes becomes tinged of a deep yellow.

The chronic species is usually accompanied with a morbid complexion, loss of appetite and flesh, costiveness, indigestion, flatulency, pains in the stomach, a yellow tinge of the skin and eyes, clay-coloured stools, high coloured urine, depositing a red sediment and ropy mucus; an obtuse pain in the region of the liver, extending to the shoulder, and not unfrequently with a considerable degree of asthma.

CAUSES.—The causes are all those producing inflammation; scirrhous tumours in the liver; injuries from external violence; mercury; hot climate; obstructing the hepatic ducts; anything that suddenly cools the liver after it has been much heated; drinking largely of wines and spirituous liquors; eating hot, spicy aliment; violent exercise; exposure of the heated body to the cold air, &c.

☞ We sleep about one-third of our natural existence.

DROPSY OF THE CHEST.

By this disease we understand a collection of water in the pericardium, a membrane which surrounds the heart, or in the cavities of the thorax. Sometimes it is diffused in the cellular texture of the lungs without being deposited in the cavity of the thorax. Occasionally the water is enveloped in small cysts of a membranous nature, known by the name of hydatids, which apparently float in the cavity, but generally are connected with, and attached to, particular parts of the internal surface of the pleura, a membrane lining the chest.

CAUSES.—The causes which give rise to the disease are much the same as those which produce other species of dropsy. In some cases it exists without any other kind of dropsical affection; but it very often prevails as a part of more universal dropsy.

Bleeding and mercury may be reckoned among the most common causes of this complaint, by the debility and effusion they occasion. Also inflammation of the lungs, liver, or any other neighboring organ. Malt liquors, ardent spirits, and whatever tends to produce debility or serous effusion, may cause it.

APOPLEXY.

SYMPTOMS.—Generally there are premonitory symptoms of apoplexy, which may be termed incipient; and it is in this stage of the disease that the most benefit of proper treatment is derived. In the first state of the disease there is generally a dull pain in the head, weakness, giddiness, particularly on stooping down, dimness of sight, drowsiness, loss of memory, faltering of the tongue, bleeding from the nose, flushed face, heat of the head, and vomiting. But its attack is often sudden, when the person falls to the ground without warning, and lies as in a deep sleep, from which he cannot be roused: or he may be convulsed, foam at the mouth, and the saliva or spittle be blown away from the mouth with considerable violence. The teeth are clenched, the face is red and puffed up, the veins of the neck and head full, bleeding from the nose, eyes fixed, breathing difficult and hard, swallowing impossible or difficult, pulse strong at first, then weak; it sometimes causes palsy of one side. The fit may last but a short time, or it may be protracted for twenty-four hours, and sometimes several days. Sometimes the first attack proves fatal; if not, each succeeding one is more aggravated; but the third one generally carries off the subject of it.

CAUSES.—There appears to be a predisposition to apoplexy, either hereditary or from a peculiar formation of the body, as a full plethoric habit, a short thick neck, a florid complexion, broad shoulders, short stature, corpulency, etc. The disease, however, sometimes occurs in persons who are spare and delicate. Persons advanced in life are more subject to it than younger persons.

The immediate cause arises from an effusion of blood, in consequence of the arteries throwing more into the veins of the head than the veins can retain, by which congestion and rupture take place; or rather their inability to return the blood.

A predisposition to apoplexy is farther given by such habits of life as tend to produce plethora generally, to drive the blood in more than ordinary quantity upon the vessels of the brain, or to prevent its free return to the heart. Hence it is that full living, habitual intoxication, sedentary pursuits, too great indulgence in sleep, intense and long continued thought, have always been accused of leading to apoplexy.

The principal exciting causes of apoplexy are, the distention of the stomach by a full meal, the immoderate use of wine or spirits, straining to evacuate a costive stool, violent exercise, very long or loud speaking, severe fits of coughing, tumors on the neck, stooping, the recumbent posture, and, lastly, violent passions of the mind. It is a singular circumstance, that both heat and cold, when in an extreme degree, may occasion apoplexy. The coup de soleil of hot climates has been considered, on good authority, to be of the nature of apoplexy. The improper use of the warm bath has brought on complete and fatal apoplexy. Bleeding and mercury are two great causes.

☞ Some people absorb mineral poison from water while bathing.

ST. VITUS' DANCE.

This singular disease is characterized by a twitching and convulsive action of certain muscles, usually confined to one side of the system; and it affects principally the arm and leg. It is chiefly incident to young persons of both sexes, but particularly those of a weak constitution, or whose health and vigor have been impaired by confinement, or by the use of scanty and improper nourishment; and makes its attacks between the ages of ten and fifteen, occurring but seldom after that of puberty. By some physicians it has been considered rather as a paralytic affection than as a convulsive disorder, and has been thought to arise from a relaxation of the muscles, which, being unable to perform their functions in moving the limbs, shake them irregularly by jerks.

CAUSES.—This disease may arise from various causes; from morbid condition of the stomach, as teething, worms, acidity in the bowels, offensive smells, violent affections of the mind, as anger, fear, etc. It may arise also from debility, and from extreme irritability of the nervous system.

☞ A man's Liver weighs from four to five pounds.

DYSPEPSIA.

SYMPTOMS.—The symptoms of indigestion differ considerably, according to the stage of the complaint, or the degree and extent of the irritation. In the commencement the appetite is variable, generally weak, and often entirely destroyed; the patient is troubled with flatulency, distention, acid eructations, and colic pains; the mind is, at times, depressed and languid; the tongue covered with a white fur; the bowels usually constipated; the whole system languid, particularly during the process of digestion; and there is almost a constant uneasy feeling in the stomach.

We may sum up the symptoms of dyspepsia as follows: Nervous debility, depression of the mind, oppression after eating, acid eructations, sick headache, costiveness, scanty and painful evacuations, jaundice, piles, female obstruction, heartburn, furred tongue, flatulency, distention of stomach and bowels, dizziness, sickness at the stomach, water brash, loss of appetite, pain in the side, and torpor of the liver and bowels.

CAUSES.—Whatever causes a derangement in the digestive organs may produce dyspepsia; the most frequent are intemperance in eating and drinking, and the want of exercise in the open air; intense anxiety of mind, depressing passions, cold, the use of animal food, hot bread, pastry, tobacco, tea and coffee, superfluous evacuations, excessive venery, mercury, bleeding, obstruction in the liver and spleen; swallowing the food without chewing is a common cause.

☞ Colds and catarrhs are the results of checked perspiration.

Miss J. Fisher, of Cleveland, O., cured of Spinal disease in very bad form. She was treated by two distinguished professors of Medicine of this City, one of the Allopathic school, and one of the Homeopathic school. One treated her seven, the other six months, without any apparent relief. She could not walk. From the first application of our Indian Remedies, she began to gain, in three months was a perfect picture of health—can walk or run—perform as much fatigue as most people, without any more exhaustion.—Cured her in four months, much to the gratification of her numerous friends and loving parents.

Cured Mrs. Madden, a Lady 72 years old, of Cancer in face, of twenty years' standing, in two months. The Cancer was on the face, involved the nose, one cheek and eye. Face healed up perfectly smooth and healthy—hardly a perceptible scar.

"The absent danger greater still appears;
Less fears he, who is near the thing he fears."

CANKER SORE MOUTH.

SYMPTOMS.—It shows itself at first by an uneasy sensation, or burning heat in the stomach, which comes on by slow degrees, and increases gradually in violence. After some time small pimples show them-selves on the tip and edges of the tongue, which at length spread over the whole inside of the mouth, and occasion such a tenderness and rawness that the patient cannot take any food of a solid nature; neither can he receive any vinous or spirituous liquor into his mouth without pain; it is accompanied with a dry skin, pale countenance, small pulse, and cold extremities. These symptoms will probably continue for some weeks, the general health being sometimes better and sometimes worse; and then the patient will be attacked with acrid eructations or severe purgings, which greatly exhaust his strength, and produce considerable emaciation of the whole body. After some time these symptoms cease, and he again enjoys better health; but sooner or later the acrid matter shows it-self once more in the mouth, with greater violence than before, and makes frequent translations to the stomach and intestines, and so from these to the mouth again, until at last the patient is reduced to a perfect skeleton.

There is a peculiar and painful sore mouth or canker incident to nursing women, and which extends throughout the whole intestines; it assumes a very obstinate character. This and the other kinds proceed from acrid secretions, which cause an inflammation of the lining membrane of the stomach and bowels.

CAUSES.—Retention of acrid humours, turned inward upon the mouth, stomach, and intestines.

☞ A child will gather disease from sleeping with an old person.

WHITES, OR FLUOR ALBUS.

SYMPTOMS.—The disease shows itself by an irregular discharge of a fluid from the uterus and vagina which, in different women, varies much in color, being of a white, green, yellow, or brown hue. In the beginning it is, however, most usually white and pellucid, and in the progress of the complaint acquires the various discolorations, and different degrees of acrimony; whence proceeds a slight smarting in making water. Besides the discharge, the patient is frequently afflicted with severe and constant pains in the back and loins, loss of strength, failure of appetite, pain in the stomach, dejection of spirits, paleness of the countenance, chillness, and languor.

CAUSES.—Debility is one great cause of this complaint, and this may be occasioned by immoderate coition, injury done to the parts by difficult and tedious labors, frequent miscarriages, immoderate flowings of the menses, excessive evacuations, and a sedentary life. Delicate women are very subject to this disease.

SEMENAL WEAKNESS.

DISCRIPTION.—By this disease is to be understood an excessive involuntary discharge of the seminal fluid. It gives rise to a variety of symptoms, which are often unsuspected or overlooked by the physician, and by the friends of the patient. The semen being the most vital fluid of the system, it is easily seen what the consequence must be when it is thrown off in an undue or excessive degree.

SYMPTOMS.—This disease produces febrile complaints, mania or mental derangement, dyspepsia or indigestion, hectic fever, and general debility. It causes a long train of complaints, tremours of the limbs, headache, restless nights, gleet or discharges from the urethra, pains of the system in different parts; the memory, judgment, reason become impaired; pain in the breast and loins, cough and consumption, weakness in the back and genitals, sometimes fits of apoplexy, hypochondria, and hysteria, and great despondency of mind.

 A woman may become pregnant any day in the month, notwithstanding the theory to the contrary.

SYPHILIS.

This is a most loathsome affection, which extends to every part of the system, and is occasioned by a specific poison, conveyed by contagion or actual contact.

Sometimes, from improper treatment or other causes, the venereal poison is taken up into the circulation, and the whole system becomes diseased; then it is known as secondary. The skin, mouth, throat, tongue, nose, tonsils, palate, eyes, and head become very much diseased. Ulcers are formed, which discharge acrid, fetid matter, which is peculiarly loathsome. The matter sometimes falls on deep-seated parts, such as the tendons, ligaments, and periosteum, and occasions hard, painful swellings to arise, known by the name of nodes.

CAUSES.—The venereal disease is supposed to arise from a specific morbid poison, which, when applied to the human body, has the power of propagating or multiplying itself, and is capable of acting both locally and constitutionally. It may arise from intercourse while menstruating.

GONORRHOEA.

SYMPTOMS.—Gonorrhoea is a discharge, resembling pus or matter, from the urethra, with heat of urine, &c, after impure coition, to which often succeeds a discharge of mucus from the urethra called a gleet, and which commences a few day after exposure. It begins with an uneasiness about the parts of generation, such as an itching in the glans, and a soreness and tingling sensation along the whole course of the urethra; soon after which the person perceives an appearance of whitish matter, and also some degree of pungency upon making water.

CAUSE.—From specific poison generated by inflammation and acrid secretions of utrus Whites, &c.

TO THE WISE.

It has been rumored that I am Acting Agent for other Institutions. I will here state, that I am not connected in any way, with any establishment but my own. I claim no knowledge from any physician or Indian Medical Institution in this country. What I use, no other physician has knowledge of, and if any one should offer for sale, medicines pretending to be in any way connected with me, I would say, beware of them, unless his or her name is printed in this book as our agent, they are humbugs, and all who expose such counterfeits will do the public, as well as myself, a great favor.

One hundred and twenty-five different medicines are compounded under my immediate direction, composed of from five to thirty different ingredients, and warranted of the first quality.

TO ALL WHO ORDER MEDICINES.

Be very careful to give Plain Directions. Sometimes packages are lost if not properly marked. Your name should be distinctly written, also your Town, County and State. Bottles cannot be sent by mail. Give us the name of the Railroad Station, or Express Office for us to send your Medicines to. Be particular to name the Post Office, if there be more than one in town, through which communications reach you.

By observing the above instructions, we will be less liable to make mistakes in directing to the many thousands to whom we are forwarding our Remedies.

MY TERMS ARE CASH.

My expenses are very heavy, and I must demand cash on all orders for Medicines. All orders should be accompanied with the money to insure my sending, otherwise, do not be surprised if I do not fill your order. I do my best to cure all the cases trusted in my hand, and the wonderful success which has crowned my efforts, attest my ability to meet disease in its various forms. I want it distinctly understood, I do not take cases depending upon my success for pay, my prices are fixed for all, unless cases personally known to me, among the very poor.

“Friendship, above all ties does bind the heart ;
And faith in friendship is the noblest part.”

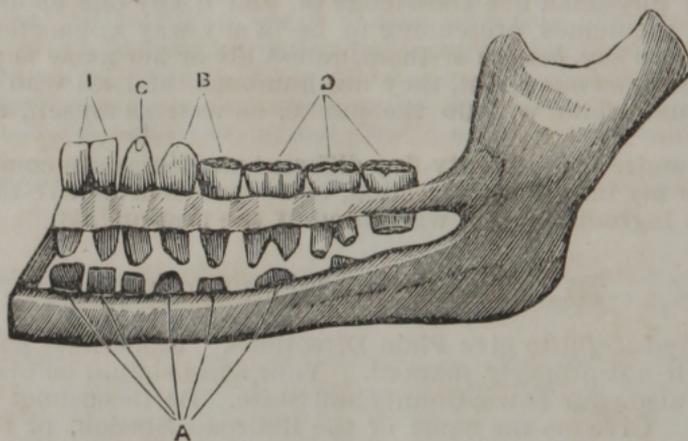

FIG. 21. THE TEEEH.

“What pity, blooming girl,
That lips so ready for a lover
Should not beneath their ruby casket cover
One tooth of pearl!
But, like a rose beside the church-yard stone,
Be doomed to blush o'er many a mouldering bone !”

Fig. 21. The Teeth. i, Represents the incisor or cutting teeth, being the eight broad and flat teeth with a sharp cutting edge, one-half seen in the upper and lower Jaws c. Cuspidati, Canine or Dog Teeth, being sharp pointed, resembling those in dogs. b, g, represents the molars or grinders, twenty in number, situated at the back part of the Jaw.

I DO NOT VISIT PATIENTS.

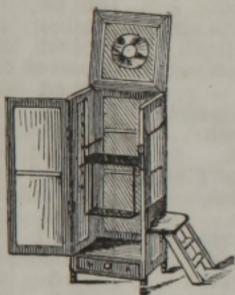

Some people have an idea that I visit patients both in the city and out of it; this I do not do. I treat no acute diseases, and do not make professional visits; this I would like understood by all.

I AM NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR DAMAGED PACKAGES.

I do not hold myself responsible for the breakage of bottles in transit. Medicines are all carefully packed, and are receipted for when delivered at the express office; the express alone is responsible. After the medicines leave my office there my responsibility ceases.

DR. LIBBEY'S PATENT VAPOR BATHS.

I am now ready to furnish my Patent Baths to those who wish them—to physicians or for family use. They can be applied to private bath rooms.

PATENTED OCTOBER
21ST, 1862.

I am ready to sell the physician's rights for using the Bath; Town, County, and State Rights, to manufacturers, also for sale.

This Bath is far superior to any other in use. It is durable, easily adjusted; is an ornament to any house; no dirt or slop attends it; easily kept in repair, and is decidedly the Best Vapor Bath in Use.

Those wishing one, or the Right for Using or Manufacturing, in either State, County, or City, can be furnished with prices, and all necessary information, by writing to my address, Cleveland, Ohio.

A recipe for proper medication will be given to purchasers.

"Truth would you teach to save a sinking land,
All shun, none aid you, and few understand."

“There’s not a plant that springeth,
But bears some good to earth ;
There’s not a life but bringeth
Its store of harmless mirth ;
The dusty, wayside clover
Has honey in its cells,—
The wild bee, humming over,
Her tale of pleasure telle ;
The osiers, o’er the fountain,
Keep cool the water’s breast,—
And on the roughest mountain
The softest moss is pressed.
Thus holy nature teaches
The worth of blessings small,
That love pervades and reaches
And forms the Bliss of all.”

SPECIAL NOTICE.

Since going to press with the present number of the Hygieina, I have, from the constant desire of so many of my patients in the different States, wishing to see me in person, concluded, in order to accommodate them, to PERMANENTLY LOCATE Institutions in each of the three places, namely, CHICAGO, Ill, CLEVELAND, O., and BOSTON, Mass., where I may be consulted in person eight days of each month. This is plainly seen is not a traveling physician's programme, for I am permanently located in each place; for the specified days of the month may be informed by consulting any of the prominent daily papers published in each of the above places. I do this to accommodate all. Those living in the extreme west can see me at Chicago; in the Middle States and Canada, at Cleveland; those in the New England States at Boston. By doing this I would be saving them a large amount of traveling expenses, especially those wishing the Baths, local treatment and personal attention. In each of these places there will be no pains spared in order to make all comfortable. I would here say that those of my patients living in Missouri, Iowa, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and extreme west, are referred to my Infirmary at Chicago, either in person, by letter, or order; those in Tennessee, Kentucky, and all Southern States, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Canada, to Cleveland; from New York, Main, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, and all Eastern States, to Boston, Mass.,

where the orders and letters directed to any of the three places will receive prompt attention. Those sending for Examinations by letter will have to wait at least two weeks for an answer, for all Examinations must be made by myself in person. I hope by this very extensive undertaking to accomodate a large number that wish my personal services. I can assure all that place themselves under my treatment a thorough discharge of professional duty on my part, to the cure of their various complaints. All that are actually in need of medicinal help cannot, I am sure, let this valuable opportunity go by without availing themselves of its benefits. I am not a traveling physician, and want it so understood. I am located, and permanently settled, where I may always be found on the specified days of each month, and at other times there will be competent clerks who will attend to all business within their control. I shall ever be ready and willing to attend, as far as is in my power, to the wants of the suffering.

☞ For full particulars of the days in each place, see daily papers.
