N.L.M.

AMID the various improvements in science that have so conspicuously marked the latter part of the last century, and continue to do honour to the present, those in the department of Natural History, are by no means the least or most unimportant. This instructive science, freed from the rubbish and the obscurity in which it was involved, has, by the genius and labours of a Linnæus, a Buffon, and their successors, justly acquired a high degree of importance in the scale of public estimation; and nations as well as individuals have sought to rival each other in promoting discoveries and in forming collections of Natural History. There is scarce a city or town of any importance in Europe that is not possessed of a cabinet of that kind; but in the United States of America, the variety of whose productions and their dissimilarity from those of the Old World offer an ample field for the researches of the naturalist, there is scarcely a collection deserving the name, excepting the one in Philadelphia belonging to Mr. Peale, whose indefatigable researches and laudable exertions to promote the knowledge of Natural History, entitle him to the gratitude of every friend of science.

Presuming on the favourable disposition of the gentlemen of this city, to promote this useful and pleasing science, and from conversation with several of them having been led to believe that a regular cabinet of Natural History, consisting of a general collection of quadrupeds, birds, fish, reptiles, insects, of the most rare and curious plants of North and South America, and of such other animals and natural productions, as can be obtained from the other parts of the globe, would prove a desideratum, not only to the amateurs of this science, but to persons of information in general, the Subscriber, proprietor of a very extensive and valuable collection of subjects of Natural History, collected and prepared by himself on the coast of Guyana in South America, and consisting of a very great variety of quadrupeds, birds, fish, reptiles, insects, fruits, seeds, &c. &c. has determined to establish such a cabinet, and has, for that purpose, taken the house No. 38, in William-Street, where he has arranged his said collection and a number of subjects already collected in this country, in a scientific manner, according to their various kinds, classes and species.

The rooms are provided with convenient furniture, with writing implements, printed catalogues of the subjects, and good authors on Natural History: and every accommodation is furnished to those who are desirous of more particularly examining the collection and of becoming more acquainted with this science.

The very flattering and honourable patronage which this establishment has obtained, when first instituted, from a number of gentlemen of the first respectability; the public approbation thereof, expressed in a letter to the proprietors, by characters of the greatest eminence in the scientific line, which has been published some time ago, and the universal acquiescence to its plan and arrangement, manifested by all those who have visited it, induced the said proprietors to cherish the hope to see it sufficiently supported by the Public at large, to be enabled to complete it by adding, daily, new subjects to the collections; but far from having subsequently met with the hoped-for encouragement, they have had the greatest difficulties to encounter, and have been obliged to solicit the assistance of some true lovers of science, who, in order to preserve the establishment to the city, have liberally stept forward in its relief, and have saved it from dissolution.

The Subscriber, at present sole proprietor of the cabinet, still confiding in the public taste, and their disposition to promote the interest of science, trusts that the ladies and gentlemen of this populous and wealthy city, when better acquainted with the merit of the institution, which has for its object to disseminate information in a most agreeable manner, and to blend the pleasing with the useful, will favour it with their patronage, by joining in its support, in a most moderate subscription.

He pledges himself to the Subscribers, and to the Public at large, to make his establishment permanent in this city; to augment his collections in proportion to the encouragement which he will receive; to exert himself as much as may be in his power, in order to make the institution truly interesting and useful; and binds himself, if enabled by an adequate support, to travel through the whole continent of North America, for the purpose of procuring a skeleton of that anonymous animal called the Mammoth, which has given so much credit to the museum of Philadelphia, and of completing, as much as can reasonably be expected, the collections of the natural productions of the United States, so that the cabinet of New-York might, in an inconsiderable time, rival, not only the above-said museum, but all institutions of the kind, in other parts.

The price of the subscription for a single gentleman is two dollars; for a gentleman and lady three dollars, and for the young ladies of the subscribers, above 12 years of age one dollar. The subscribers receive a ticket, which entitles them to daily admittance during a year, from the date thereof. The tickets not transferable.

The children of the subscribers, under 12 years of age, are admitted without any payment, when in the company of their parents.

The price of admittance for non-subscribers, until the cabinet is complete, is 25 cents, after which it will be 50 cents, without any distinction of age.

Although many natural historians have classed the oviparous quadrupeds with fish, reptiles or insects, I make bold to place them immediately after the viviparous, as it cannot be denied, from the conformation of their limbs, that they are really four-footed, and thus quadrupeds.

Having not been able to procure the authors who have particularly described each species of them, I am under the necessity of referring to Oliver Goldsmith's, or George Henry Millar's General Descriptions of the same, whose works are provided at the Cabinet.

My respect for the authority of Linnæus, Brisson, Buffon, Pennant and others, who have classed this bird among the cloven-footed Water-Birds, obliges me to place it here, in the order ascribed to it by Pennant, in his systematic index; though conscious, from repeated observations, made on birds of this kind, during my stay in Cayenne, that they belong to the Land-Birds: for I have opened several of them, and have always found in their crops and stomachs seeds, buds, berries and insects, and never any fish, crabs, nor shrimps, which would have been the case, if they were Water-Birds. It is, however, true that they keep constantly in the overflowed savannas, and round the ponds and lakes, which abound in that country; but the reason thereof is, their feeding on the seeds and berries of the shrubs which grow therein.

FOSSILS AND MINERALS.

The collection of the several genera which compose this part of Natural History being as yet very small, I postpone classing and numbering the objects of it, till this Catalogue is re-printed; when, by the generous assistance of the patrons of this institution, and by my own exertions, I will be enabled to present the Subscribers with an enlarged Catalogue, relative to this interesting branch of science. TO THE LOVERS OF NATURAL HISTORY.

THE proprietor of the Cabinet, while exerting himself in increasing the collection with as many indigenous subjects as he may be able to procure, takes the liberty of recommending the institution to the subscribers, and to the public at large, for all such exotic animals, birds and natural productions, as they may receive from abroad, and have no particular use for, and for all such as may die in their possession. Besides the satisfaction of viewing them in the Cabinet, whenever they may chuse, the donors thereof will see their names inserted among the benefactors and patrons of the institution, and will receive the grateful thanks of the proprietor for their support.

The said proprietor, at present too busy in augmenting the collections of the Cabinet, has it not in his power to comply with the desire of several of his subscribers, in giving lectures on that part of Natural History, which relates to the animal kingdom; but should readily gratify their wish at a future period, if he could hope to meet with a sufficient degree of indulgence for his deficiency in the English language.

THE above list, though amply sufficient in point of respectability, not being adequate in point of number, to the wants of the Cabinet, the proprietor thereof, conscious that its utility is sufficiently established by the testimony of the learned gentlemen, who have been pleased to write to the former owners thereof, the letter hereafter inserted, presuming that the delay of the greatest part of the wealthy inhabitants of this populous city, in joining in the support of this institution, at the scanty rate fixed, is only occasioned by their doubts concerning its stability and permanence in the same, for being owned by a foreigner, wholly unknown to them, has, in order to remove all doubts thereabout, proposed, and still proposes to cede and transfer the property thereof, to any number of gentlemen, who may wish to form a society for that purpose. To that end a subscription has been opened since the beginning of July last; but several reasons have concurred in preventing its being filled before now. The said proprietor still persevering in his aforesaid determination, and sincerely wishing to remove all obstacles to the prosperity of the institution, makes use of this opportunity for renewing his said proposals, and for publishing the list of the signatures hitherto obtained to the same, by inserting herein a copy thereof.

SUBSCRIPTION,

" For the purpose of forming a Society, for the promotion of the Science of Natural History, in all its branches.

" The subscribers, desirous to secure to the City of New-York the useful and interesting establishment begun by Delacoste & Curling, under the denomination of Cabinet of Natural History, agree by these, to form a Society, for the purpose of purchasing and continuing the same, and for that end to raise a capital of five thousand dollars, by shares of fifty dollars each, to be appropriated to that purpose.

" As soon as the above sum is subscribed for, the subscribers thereto will meet, for the purpose of naming a Committee, who will be charged with the execution of this plan; with framing rules and regulations for the government of the Society; with agreeing with Delacoste & Curling for the price of the Cabinet, which is not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, [exclusive of the additions made, and expences incurred since;] and with Delacoste separately, for the indemnification to be allowed him, for his further attendance and exertions, in increasing and arranging the collections: it being understood that he shall become obligated to remain with the institution, and to exert himself under the direction of the committee in the same manner, as he would have done, if the property had remained with him.

"The present engagement is not to become binding upon the subscribers, till the whole sum shall be subscribed for."

" Gentlemen,

" In reply to your request we cheerfully express our approbation of the establishment which you contemplate.

" A museum containing the various objects of Natural History, scientifically arranged, is in all countries acknowledged to be an important and useful institution, but in this country, the natural productions of which are but imperfectly known, an establishment of this sort is peculiarly interesting, and deserves support.

" We have also examined the arrangement you propose to make of the objects of Natural History which compose your Cabinet, and have no hesitation to say, that it will be such as will prove most useful and instructive to those who may visit your collection.

" We also add our wishes for the success of your undertaking, and that it may receive the countenance and support of the citizens of New-York, inasmuch as it is the first institution of this nature which has been established in this city, and promises to be an useful school for the instruction of our youth in a very pleasing and valuable branch of science.
